"..... M'NAMARA of Ballymarka who died Decembr. ye 22d Ano. Do. 1722 may he rest in pace, amen. Erectd. by his son MICHAEL Ano. Dom. 1750."

'This latter Michael was grandfather of the John Macnamara whose inscription is given above. The tomb in Quin Abbey was barbarously mutilated some years ago to make room for the hideous vault built for Rev. Dr. M'Mahon, but quite enough of the inscription remains to identify it. The stonecutter made several blunders in the spelling, but English schoolmasters were scarce in Thomond in those days, Irish being still the language of the country.'

'East of the tomb of John Macnamara, but outside the foundations of the MacGorman Chapel, is a very curious tombstone.'

'The inscription on this Foster tomb is as follows, and is now nearly illegible':—

"Remember mortal who this Flag may see,
As I am now you shall hereafter be
Since Eve's Sons must nature's Tribute pay,
Soon or late must come this way.
Let true Compassion thy Kind mind dispose,
To pray for my immortal parts Repose."

"This tombstone was | erected By Mr. PATRICK FOSTER | of
Bankill For the use of his Father and himself and | Posterity.
Use of his Father | PATRICK FOSTER who died | January
the 25th 1758 age | year 73."

'The Heraldry in above tombstone is very bad.

'The correct crest is a stag's head erased holding an arrow point in base, in its mouth.'

'To the south of the preceding is another Foster tomb. The Robert Foster mentioned in it was another son of the above Patrick Foster who died in 1758. The inscription is as follows':—

'Crest.'

"Here lies the Body of | ROBERT FOSTER of Kells | Esqr.
who died April 9th | 1786, & his Wife ELLENOR | FOSTER
als O'BRIEN & their daughter ELENOR DAVO | REN als

their son FRANCIS FOSTER of Rinrow | who died April
16th 1813 Agd | 72 yrs. Erected by his son | JOHN
FOSTER of Rinrow for | them & Posterity | May 30th 1831."

'North of the Macnamara tomb is the following':—

"Sacred to the memory of HENRY O'FLANAGAN M.D.
who was | born January 1831 and died Oct. |
7th 1865 of Fever caught in the discharge | of his duties at the Cragenock | Dispensary. In him was sown

the | seeds of a good Physician. But death | has

[From T. J. Westropp.]

'Noughaval Church is a building of considerable antiquity, and has not as yet been described by our antiquaries. The chancel arch and much of the side walls belong to the 11th century. The gable of the chancel has been rebuilt, but part (at any rate) of the east window is ancient, having a semicircular head, the light only 8 inches wide. Two south windows and the side of a third of similar character remain. The chancel arch threatens to fall; it is semicircular, 10 feet 10 inches wide, of well-fitted blocks; the piers have a slight impost and base, and a roll moulding at the angles. Several blocks of a boldly-moulded window lie about the nave, being probably of the early 11th century. The existing south windows are at least 400 years later, with flat lintels and mullions, the first of two lights, the eastern of three, and quite perfect. The south door is possibly late 12th century, and suggestive of Corcomroe Abbey, though the belief that it was removed from that place has no foundation. It has impost mouldings and a flat lintel with a deeply-moulded pointed arch above it enclosing a tympanum. The mouldings are crossed by neat bars deeply undercut. The west gable is down, and the masonry near it is large and very archaic. The nave measures 53 feet by 21 feet 6 inches, the chancel 28 feet by 20 feet 9 inches. In the graveyard is a small stone-roofed chapel 20 feet by 12 feet. The roof and side wall are on the point of falling, though it was repaired by the O'Davorens in 1725, and its pointed door still stood in 1839. The east and south windows are oblong slits, with flat heads and plain chamfer; west of this is an altar-like slab pierced by an oblong hole, through which rises a rude Celtic cross. The octagonal pier, forming the lower part of the mediæval market cross, stands near the churchyard gate, and a well dedicated to the otherwise unknown St. Mogua, is in a depression to the east of the church, and overshadowed by an aged and fantastic ash tree. A full description of the notable stone forts in the adjoining fields will be found in my paper now in course of publication in the Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland.'

Quin Abbey.

[From the Dublin Penny Journal, for 1834.]

"Quin, called also Quint or Quinchy, is situated in the barony of Bunratty, about five miles east of Ennis. An abbey was founded here at an early period, which was consumed by fire, A.D. 1278. In 1402, Mac Cam Dall Macnamara, lord of Glancoilean, erected the present monastery, being a beautiful strong building of black marble; his tomb is still remaining. This monastery, with all the manors, advowsons, &c., of Daveunwall, Ichanee, Downagour, and divers others, with the site of all the hereditaments thereof, was granted to Sir Turlough O'Brien, of Innishdyman (Innistymon) in fee, December 14, 1583. The monastery was repaired in 1664. Bishop Pococke thus describes its present state:—'Quin is one of the finest and most entire monasteries that I have seen in Ireland. It is situated on a fine stream, with an ascent of several steps to the church; at the entrance one is surprised with the view of the high altar entire, and of an altar on each side of the arch of the chancel. To the south is a chapel, with three or four altars in it, and a very Gothic figure in relief of some saint. On the north side of the chancel is a fine monument of the family of the Macnamaras of Rance, erected by the founder; On a stone by the high altar the name of Kennedye appears in large letters; in the middle, between the body and the chancel, is a fine tower built on the gable ends.'

"There are the remains of a curious representation of a Crucifixion in stucco on the wall near the high altar, that have escaped, I believe, the observation of all travellers."

"The abbey was not founded till after 1318, and before 1350 (so Magrath, in 1360, and Wadding). Archdall mistakes the record in Annals, which refers to burning of church. (See Journal R.H.A.A.I., 1889.)

'Easter 1807, March 31st':—

'At a Vestry held for the united parishes of Doneraile and Templeroane, it was resolved that the steeple of the church being in a state of decay, the roof, floors, and stairs all rotten and in danger of falling, it requires immediate repair.

'That an estimate for completely repairing the same and erecting a spire on the steeple, according to an estimate and plan this day produced by Mr. Fetherstone, will amount to the sum of £100.

'That in order to lighten the same on the parish, that our churchwardens do solicit a subscription from the gentlemen of said parishes, and that they do report the success of the same at an adjournment of this Vestry, to be held on the 21st day of April next.

'That the sum of ten pounds in the churchwardens' hands for a stove (there not being room for one in the church), be applied for the above purpose, which reduces the sum to be raised to ninty pounds only.

COUNTY DONEGAL.

Ballyshannon Parish.

[From the Rev. S. G. Cochrane.]

'The annexed drawing represents a sculptured stone 30 inches long, by 20 inches wide, dug up lately in the churchyard of this parish church, from a photograph by Mr. H. Allingham, of Ballyshannon, M.R.I.A.

'The stone appears to have been either built into a wall, or perhaps was the end stone of an altar tomb; the sculpture on it is distinct, and is admirably cut. At the top is a Saracen's head resting on a scroll; under this a visored helmet, these two are encircled with ornamental design boldly executed. Beneath these is a square shield, with four compartments: on the top of the shield on the dexter side (1st qr.) is a lion rampant; on the sinister side (2nd qr.) are three scallop shells; at the bottom dexter (3rd qr.) are three cushions; and on the bottom sinister (4th qr.) is a star-fish (or star 5 points); under all is a ribbon with the motto, "VIRTUS MOUET REX FOUET."

Mr. Cochrane considers them the crest and arms of a Norman Crusader, knighted on the field of battle for slaying a Turk, and was made a baron for three exploits.

The work is all raised, except the motto, which is incised.

We are able to identify this curious old stone by comparison with one over the west door of the old Church of Derrygonnelly, County Fermanagh, which we had hoped to have also illustrated in this year's Journal, but have been obliged to postpone, not having been furnished with the necessary information.

Caldwell, near Bundoran.

In the March quarter number of the Journal of the R.S.A.I., page 84, will be found a brief account of the tombstone here represented. The writer, Miss L. A. Walkington, states that the legend runs that a young married woman went to wash her clothes in a stream near her house, when she was attacked and killed, and her blood sucked by a marine monster called a "Dhuraghoo." She describes the dhuraghoo as a half wolf-dog, half fish, according to some, and as an enormous sea otter, according to others.

This animal is shown at the head of the tombstone, with a spear passing through his body. The woman's husband (or brother, according to some accounts) went to look for his wife; he found her dead, and was himself attacked by the beast. The horse the man was riding ran away. The dhuraghoo passed through the horse and killed it; the husband speared the dhuraghoo and destroyed it.

'Two other tombstones are shown in connection with the story,—one bearing an image of the horse, and (another) said to be that of the husband.'

There is a Maltese Cross below the inscription.

We are indebted to Mr. J. Cooke, of Dublin, and to Dr. Geo. Norman, of Bath—the first for mentioning, the latter for kindly sending us a photograph of the tombstone, from which the annexed plate is taken.

COUNTY DOWN.

Parish of Bangor.

With reference to the "startling advertisement" given on page 61 of our Journal for 1895, with regard to the alleged offer for sale of two graves and a headstone in Bangor churchyard, in this county, we have received a letter from the Very Revd. Ed. Maguire, D.D., Dean of Down, Rector of Bangor, enclosing a copy of a letter he sent to the Editor of the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette, explaining the origin of the advertisement, and attributing it to "the act of a crazy old woman who had no burial rights in the churchyard, and wanted a little money to take her to America," and adding that "the sale of graves already occupied, or of gravestones to or by any person whatsoever, would on no account be permitted"—a statement we rejoice to hear, and gladly print.

Parish of Holywood.

[From "Mason," v. 3, p. 210.]

"It appears by the vestry book, that, from the year 1768 to 1810, the year when the present (1819) incumbent took possession, there have been 12 incumbents, so that the period of the incumbency of each of their ministers averages three years and six months."

'Their names are as follow:—

EDW. WINDER ... 1768	A. JOHNSTON
GEORGE M'CARTNEY	NATHANIAL SMITH
JAMES FETHERSTON	RICHARD WOLSELY
ROBERT HEYLAND	HENRY LESLIE
G. M. PORTIS	WILLIAM PRATT 1809
JACOB STEWART	EDW. GROVES ... 1809

'The Parish Register began in 1806.

'The present church was built in 1844, consecrated 1869.'

Inch.

[From the Dublin Penny Journal, vol. i., p. 397.]

"In this church [the Abbey of Inch, County Down] was buried Sir JAMES MELVILLE, supposed to be a descendant of the famous knight of the same name, who was secretary to Mary Queen of Scots, and author of the memoirs that pass under his name. The monument of the former, which is of freestone, and placed in an arch on the north side of the altar, is, according to Harris, thus set out. Over a scutcheon of arms, the supporters of which are two birds, the rest being defaced, you have this line, viz. :—

"S. ANNO 1628. D."

Then, on the top of the scutcheon in one quarter, I. M., and in the other quarter A. R. At the foot of the scutcheon on one side, are these words thus placed :—

"CHRISTO ET CRUCE
IN ————— SPERO."

and underneath this inscription :—

"INSIGNIS · MILES · MELVILLUS · CARNBIA ·
PROLES · I MOLE · SUB · HAC · LAPIDUM
MORTUUS · ECCE · JACET · I SCOTIA ·
NATALEM · CELEBRAVIT · HIBERNIA · FUNUS."

Killinchy Churchyard.

We are sorry to be obliged to call attention to the following extract from a letter of the Rector of Killinchy, bearing date June the 9th, 1896, which was published in the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette :—

"Four years ago, when cutting the grass, the men were instructed to gather the human bones lying on one third of God's acre ; the result was 453 of various sizes ; seldom or never were the graves made more than 2½ feet deep. On one occasion I saw from the same grave two coffins lifted out and a third broken up, and the putrid human remains shovelled out on the grave side."

We feel sure that our readers will agree with us that the above needs neither note nor comment from us. The statement of the case will be deemed sufficient.

'The following tablet has been placed on south side of this Church, between two of the windows, and in the place where the old pulpit stood':—

Parish of Newry.

'St. Mary's Parish Church was built in the year 1819, and superseded a much older one, St. Patrick's, which was afterwards reopened as a Chapel of Ease. The chief contributors to the cost of erection were Mr. Needham, Lord of the Manor, and Sir Trevor Corry.'

'The tablets and monuments in the church are exceptionally numerous and interesting. There are many monuments to the Corry family, formerly of Rockcorry, Co. Monaghan, and for quite 150 years settled in Newry. The Register of Marriages goes back to 1784, the year in which the Rev. William Campbell became Vicar of Newry. Before the Disestablishment, Newry was an Exempt Jurisdiction (under no Bishop), and was governed by a lay abbot, the Earl of Kilmorey. The Vicars of Newry were also Vicars-General of Newry and Morne.'

Donnybrook old Churchyard.

[From the Rev. R. S. Maffett.]

‘Archdall says, in the fourth volume of his edition of “Lodge’s Peerage of Ireland,” that Oliver, the second Viscount Fitz-William, who was created Earl of Tyrconnel for his signal services to the royalist cause, “lies buried under a handsome tomb of black marble, in the Chapel of the family’s foundation in Donnybrooke-Church, with this inscription, over which are the arms of Fitz-William, and the coronet, but no crest or supporters’ :—

“Here lyeth the Body of the Right Honourable And most Noble LORD OLIVER, Earl of Tyrconnel, Lord Viscount FITZ-WILLIAMS, of Meryonge, Baron of Thorn-Castle, who died at his House in Meryong April 11th 1667, and was Buried the 12th day of the same month.”

‘This tomb is not now to be found; nor Archbishop King’s, if he ever had one. The building materials of the old church were sold, it appears, some sixty years ago.’

Drumcondra Parish.! [From a notice in the Wexford Independent, signed M. L. M.]

[See vol. ii., page 78, for a notice of Grose’s tombstone.]

‘Captain Grose is buried in Drumcondra Churchyard, about ten paces west of Furlong’s Monument.

‘His last resting place is sadly neglected; an ordinary slab thrown flat over the grave, marked the spot, which has the following inscription therein’ :—

“To the memory
CAPTAIN GROSE
F.R.S.
Who while in cheerful conversation with his friends
Expired in their Arms,
Without a Sigh,
18th May, 1801,
Aged 60.”

This differs very considerably from the inscription above referred to. The dates appear to be incorrect. We believe Grose died on 16th, not the 18th of May, and in the year 1791, not 1801, as here stated.

It is stated that his father was a Swiss jeweller; and that he was born in England in 1731, and came first to Ireland in 1790. [Eb.]

"Captain Grose, after having finished the antiquities of England, Wales, and Scotland, saw his design was incomplete without a survey of Ireland, and accordingly he bent his course hither in the spring of 1791. By the aid of numerous friends, and his own incessant application, he soon made a good collection of drawings, but death prematurely arrested him in his career, and he departed this life in May the same year."—Anth. Hib., vol. i., p. 55.

In vol. iv., Anthologia Hibernica, is given a full-length sketch of Grose.

"Having completed this arduous undertaking [Scotland], he engaged in a work of a similar nature for Ireland, and had actually put several drawings which he had made in the north of Ireland, into the hands of his engraver, when he was suddenly snatched away from the anxious public, and his inconsolable friends, on the 16th of May, 1791."—p. 322.

Krishtown—St. Matthew's.

[From the Rev. R. S. Maffett.]

'The Royal Chapel of St. Matthew, Ringsend, as this church was formerly designated, was erected in the reign of Queen Anne, owing to the distance of the locality from the Parish Church of Donnybrook, and the dangerous state of the roads, arising from the frequent overflowing of the Dodder. St. Matthew's was in the patronage of the Crown till the disestablishment. Shortly afterwards it became the church of a separate parish, and has been restored and enlarged; the ivy-covered tower, however, is still an attractive object, from its ancient appearance.

'There are five tablets in this church, all of which are now affixed to the west wall. The following inscription is from the lower memorial at the south side of the door':—

"IN REMEMBRANCE OF | ELIZABETH | THE
BELOVED WIFE OF | COLONEL MUNRO |
ROYAL ARTILLERY. | SHE DIED IN DUBLIN |
20TH. DECEMBER | 1843."

'At the other side of the door there is a tablet somewhat similar, but mounted on a black back, which has on its margin KIRK FECIT. The inscription is as follows':—

“To | ROBERT HANNA A.B. T.C.D. |
 THIS TABLET WAS ERECTED | BY HIS PUPILS
 IN THE R^{EVD.} D^{R.} WALL'S | SCHOOL |
 HE DIED OCT^{R.} 25TH 1848 | AGED 23 YEARS.”

‘The remaining three memorials are placed on a line above those given, one being over the door. They are larger, and mounted on black; the inscriptions on all five are in capital letters, the texts excepted. The tablet to the south has, above the inscription, a draped urn, and on the black background below there are arms, crest, and motto, in white.

‘From the height of the memorial it is difficult to decipher the arms. They are probably: Azure, on a chief (ermine, or perhaps or) a lion passant (gardant?). The crest is a demi-lion rampant, with a battle axe in its paws. The motto: NULLA PALLESCERE CULPA.’

“ERECTED BY THE MEMBERS OF

 FORTH OF HIS GLORY.

“O God, thou hast taught me from my youth; and hitherto have i [sic] declared thy wondrous works.” PSALM LXXI. 17TH.

‘Dr. Wall had a school at No. 6 Hume-street. During part of the time mentioned above he was only assistant chaplain, first under the Rev. R. Ball, and afterwards under the Rev. J. E. Johnston.’

‘The memorial above the door is surmounted by an urn on a pedestal; the inscription reads as follows:—

“S.M. | OF | JOHN SMYTH A.M. M.D.
 T.C.D | OF BELMONT HOUSE STILLORGAN,

CO. OF DUBLIN. | ESTEEMED BY HIS
 ACQUAINTANCES, | ENDEARED TO HIS
 FRIENDS, | BELOVED BY HIS FAMILY. |
 THRO' A LIFE OF VARIED USEFULNESS |
 HIS PATH WAS THAT OF THE JUST, | "AS
 THE SHINING LIGHT THAT SHINETH MORE |
 AND MORE UNTO THE PERFECT DAY." |
 RELEASED FROM HIS LABORS | HE RESTED
 WITH HIS REDEEMER | DECEMBER 4TH 1852."

'Dr. Smyth would seem to have been, in 1826, the proprietor of a school (on the north side of the city, conducted on the same plan as Dr. Wall's on the south), as well as a practising Physician. See Watson's Almanack for that year, p. 175.

'The last tablet has on it':—

"SACRED TO THE MEMORY | OF | JOHN
 BABINGTON SMYTH | SON OF |
 JOHN SMYTH M.D. | BELMONT HOUSE
 STILLORGAN | BORN IN 1822 | DIED
 SEPTEMBER 27TH 1845."

"Ποία γὰρ ἡ ζωὴ ἰμῶν; ἀτμὶς."

James iv. 14.

'On referring, after taking the inscriptions, to Mr. Blacker's book, "Brief Sketches," I found that the words "Son of John Smyth" were omitted in it, the "M.D." being thus wrongly attached (possibly by a printer's error) to the former name.'

'There are in the chancel six windows of coloured glass, grouped into three sets of two lights each.

'Beginning at the north side, the first represents our Saviour as the Light of the World, with the inscription beneath':—

"BEHOLD I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK."

'A second inscription on the glass at the bottom of the window reads as follows':—

"THE GIFT OF THOSE CONFIRMED IN THIS | CHURCH—ERECTED 1890."

'The second window represents Christ in a ship with his disciples.

'The two inscriptions are respectively':—

"PEACE. BE STILL. ST. MARK. IV. 39.

'And

"IN MEMORY OF JOHN S. M. JACKSON. M.B.
SEN.' MOD.' SURGEON. | S.S. ANGOLA.
WASHED OVERBOARD ON DUTY. 1892."

'On the two centre windows are shown respectively the Baptism of our Lord, and the Institution of the Lord's Supper. The only inscription on the former is':—

"IN. MEMORY. OF WALTER. RAMSAY.
1885."

'And on the latter':—

"TO. THE. GLORY. OF. GOD. CHRISTMAS 1886."

'The next window represents Christ with a lamb in his arms. Underneath is':—

"I AM THE GOOD SHEPHERD."

'And on the glass low down':—

"TO THE MEMORY OF MAY ATKINSON | FELL ASLEEP OCT 1876 AGED 15."

'On the adjoining window our Lord is represented with Martha and Mary.

'The two inscriptions are respectively':—

"AND MARY HATH CHOSEN THAT GOOD PART."
LUKE x. 42nd.

'And

"IN MEMORY OF | MARY JANE ATKINSON.
1889."

'The letters on the windows are, for the most part, slightly ornamental capitals.

Lusk Church.

The fine plate on the opposite page represents the top of the Barnewall tomb in this church, as given by the late G. V. Du Noyer (see vol. ii., p. 99, of these Journals for further illustration of it); both these dresses give every idea of great magnificence.

St. Michan's.

[From the Rev. R. S. Maffett.]

'At the top of page 480, in the second volume of the Journal of the Association, a few defective lines are given from an inscription to the relief of Col. Thos. Whitney, on the porch floor, under the tower of St. Michan's.

TOP OF THE BARNWALL ALTAR-TOMB
IN LUSK CHURCH, CO. DUBLIN.

(See "Memorials of the Dead," vol. ii, p. 99.)

The full inscription has been happily preserved in the sixth volume of Archdall's edition of Lodge's "Peerage," under the heading of "Cole, Viscount Enniskillen." Sir William Cole, Archdall says, was married twice, "and dying in October 1653, was buried in St. Michan's Church, Dublin, leaving two sons." He then appends the following note:—"And it is thought that Sir Robert Cole, of Ballymakey, of County of Tipperary, Knt., who served in the Parliament of 1661, for Enniskillen, and was attainted in 1689 as an absentee, was a third son of Sir William. His wife lies buried under the belfry of St. Michan's Church, with the following memorial:—

"I shall see the Lord in Glory.
Here under lyeth, the body of ANNE, Lady
COLE, daughter of JOHN SPERAT of Grainge
In Oxfordshire, Esq., first relict of SIR
ROBT. COLE, of Ballymakey, in the County of Tipperary, Knight, with whom
She came over to Ireland in the year 1670.
Afterwards the relict of COLONEL THOMAS WHITNEY
Of Newpass, in the County of Westmeath, who Departed May 30, 1716, in the 62d. year
Of her Age."

By her Will she bequeathed £100 for the support of an English school in Ballymakey aforesaid.—(Lodge.)"

'Since writing the above, I have come upon this inscription (with immaterial differences) in Canon Dwyer's "Diocese of Killaloe." At page 514, under "Ballymackey," he says:—"There are some monuments in the graveyard, of which the following is curious enough." He misses the really curious point, however, viz.:—That this lady would seem not only to have been married twice, but to have been buried in two places! I leave it to the Association to decide upon the explanation of this strange fact. Could Canon Dwyer, who makes a similar statement as to her legacy to Ballymackey parish, have taken the epitaph from Archdall, misunderstanding the application of the phrase, "St. Michan's Church"? The contributor of the imperfect inscription to the Journal speaks of the "first line," only, as "illegible," and gives "his" instead of "her" in the last line, but Archdall's meaning seems clear. One of the tombs, if there are two, might be a cenotaph, but those who erected it would scarcely commit the gross blunder of retaining (without explanatory words) "Here-under lieth."

St. Peter's.

'In the row of memorial stones placed against the north boundary of the churchyard, the one nearest to Aungier-street bears the following inscription:—

"To the Memory of
 THE HON GEORGE JOCELYN
 2nd Son of ROBERT 1st Earl of Roden by ANNE

only surviving Child & Heiress of JAMES 1st Earl of Clanbrasill
 he died March 15th 1796,

aged 32 years

Also to the Memory of
 THE HON
 THOMASINA COLE JOCELYN
 otherwise BOWEN his wife who died Oct. 15th 1818,
 aged 56 years."

'There is nothing more on this stone, nor I believe ever was; the words "aged 56 years" are more than 2 feet above the surface of the ground.'

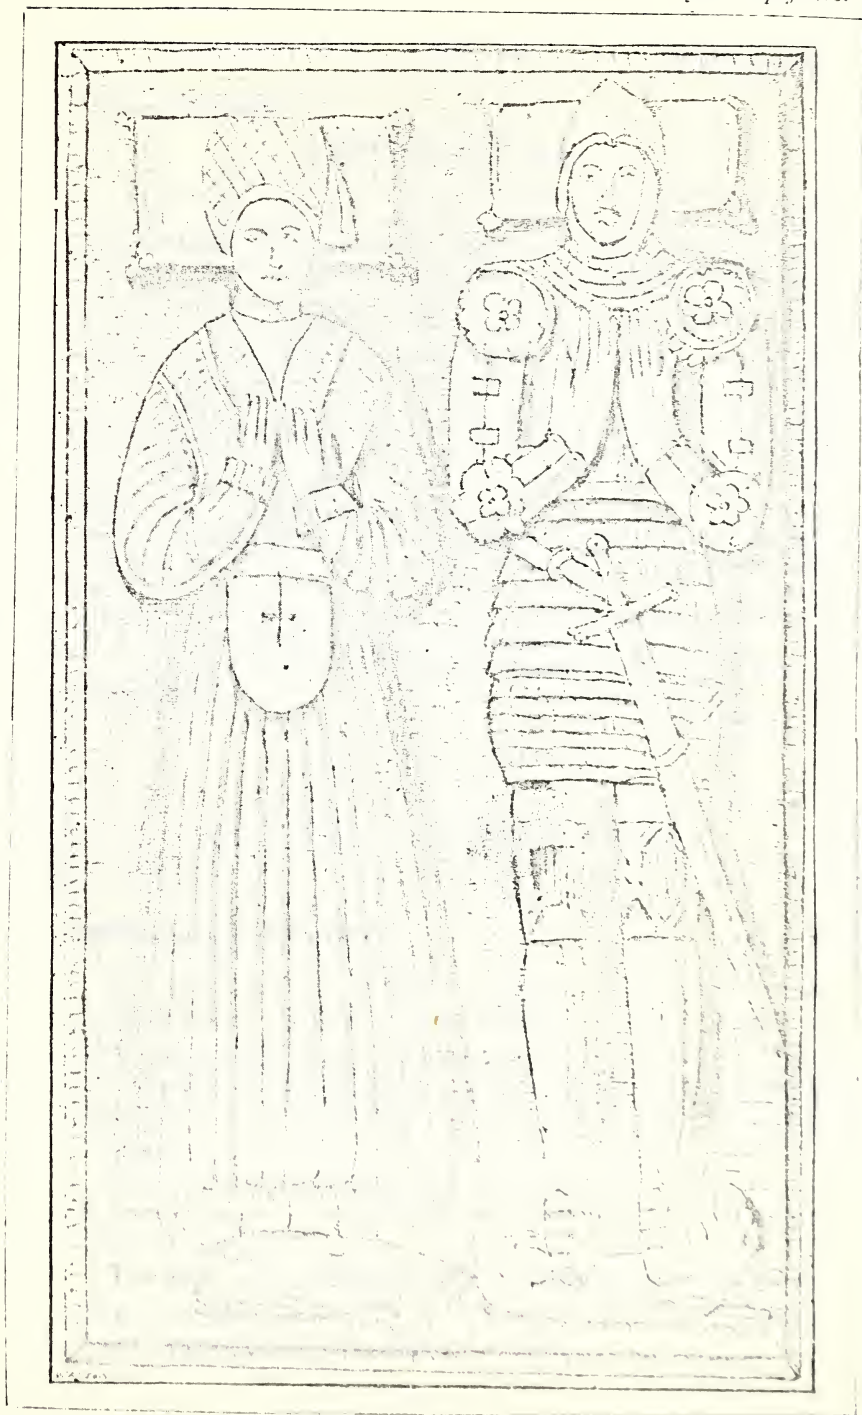

'The second and third in the row have respectively the following inscriptions':—

"To the Memory of | WALTER STEELE ESQ |
 who died May 4th 1826, | aged 35 years. |
 Also of NORMAN his infant Son, | who was born and died in May 1821."

"ELEANOR MARIA | Wife of PETER
 FITZGIBBON HENCHY of | Merrion Square : |
 one of his Majesty's Counsel : | died 9th
 January 1831. | aged 52 Years."

"On page xxvii. of the "Index and Addenda" to volume ii., there has been added, wrongly, a "corrigendum" with reference to the inscription to the Rev. Philip Skelton. The name of the parish was given in the inscription (vol. ii., page 486) as it is carved on the stone itself. It may be of interest to mention that the whole of this inscription is to be found in Cotton's "Fasti" (vol. iii., page 100), as well as in Burdy's "Life of Skelton." Cotton's copy is more correct, according to the stone, than Burdy's in the first five lines; but afterwards, on the whole, possibly less so. Burdy is certainly right as to the thirteenth line, which is above the ground. There are some eight variations between Burdy and Cotton in the wording of this latter part. The form of the letters may be more correct in Cotton, but the arrangement into lines is undoubtedly the reverse."

IN HOWTH ABBEY.

Howth Parish.[Dublin Penny Journal.]

'In the south aisle of the Abbey of Howth [Co. Dublin], near the east window, stands a tomb, on the slab of which are represented, in a recumbent posture, in high relief, the figure of a knight, and by his side that of a lady. The heads of both are supported on tasselled cushions; the feet of the knight rest upon a dog, and those of the lady on a cushion similar to that under her head. The hands of both are raised and laid flat on the breast, the palms inwards, the countenances are peculiarly placid and agreeable. The knight is in a complete armour from crown to heel, and belted with his trusty sword. His lady love is attired in a fanciful breaddress, a close bodice, wide sleeves, terminated at the wrists by cuffs, and from the waist is enveloped in an elegantly plaited tunic, the train of which descends in graceful folds below her feet; a nondescript ornament hangs in front, on which a cross may be traced. On the bevelled edges of slab there has been an inscription, now defaced; the sides and ends are beautifully sculptured, the head and foot represent the figures of saints in Gothic niches; and on the sides the armorial bearings of the family and its connexions are displayed, surrounded by rich and florid tracery: among these escutcheons the arms of St. Lawrence and Plunket, are the most conspicuous.

'The lady on the slab and the Plunket arms occupy the place of honour, the dexter side.'

COUNTY Fermanagh.Innismacsaint Parish.

We regret we are unable to present our readers, in this number of our Journal, with an interesting sketch (which we have been promised) of a carved stone over the west door of the old Church of Derrygonelly in this county, and also some inscriptions from tombstones in the churchyard belonging thereto.

The stone above referred to bears the date 1627, and has on it the arms, &c., of, it is believed, Sir John Dunbar, the builder of the church.

We hope to be furnished with the necessary particulars in time to enable us to give a drawing of this stone and some notes thereon in our next Journal.—[Ed.]

COUNTY GALWAY.

Abbey Knockmoy, Parish of Abbey Knockmoy.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, F.R.S.A.I.]

'This abbey lies seven miles to the south of Tuam; it is one of the National Monuments, and well looked after. It is famous for the frescoes on the north wall of the choir, but they are now very faint; and of the writing, in Gothic characters, describing the subjects, only a word here and there is now legible. Ledwich, in his "Antiquities of Ireland," has given illustrations of them.

'There was formerly a lettered stone on one side of the niche in the north wall of the choir; but it is now at Ballyglunin House, three miles off. The lettering is in Gothic characters, and in the Irish language':—

“Do Mhulachláind O'Keallaid
Do rí Omani agus dindhnaláind inge í chonchuir do ríne Matha O'Cogú in leabaig sea.”

'i.e.—For Malaghlin O'Kelly, for the king of Hy Mani, and for Finola, the daughter of O'Conor, for Mathew O'Cogan who made this Bed (tomb).—Vide Co. Galway Ordnance Survey Letters.'

'In the "Annals of the Four Masters," Melaghlin O'Kelly's death is given under the year 1224.'

'Another interesting, though unfinished, inscription is to be seen on a slab lying in the choir; it runs down the head and shaft of a cross cut on a bevelled edged slab, measuring 5 feet 2 inches in length, and in breadth at the head 18 inches, narrowing to 12 inches at the foot. This inscription is also in Gothic characters, but in Latin, and reads thus':—

“Hic jacet Mauricius filius incaini p Conchannaid cum sue uxore.”

'i.e.—'Here lies Maurice, son of Incain O'Conannon, with his wife.'

'The following inscriptions are all copied from slabs also lying in the choir.

'A narrow coffin-shaped slab, with incised lettering':—

‘In a side chapel on the south side of the Abbey Church is an altar-tomb belonging to the French family; inserted in the wall over it is a limestone mural monument measuring 4 feet 3 inches in height, and 3 feet 10 inches in width. This monument was erected to the memory of Lady Evelyn French, who, according to Burke’s “Landed Gentry,” was the wife of Sir Oliver French, of Monivea (which lies four miles to the south of Abbey Knockmoy).

‘Dividing the first seven lines of the inscription (which is in relief) is a crest—“A Dolphin naiant embowed proper,” and below that again a coat of arms, in the dexter half is the French coat—“Ermine, a chevron sable”; while the sinister half* is divided into two parts, the upper portion contains a double-headed eagle, and the lower, a chevron between birds. The inscription is as follows :—

* The sinister arms I believe to be those of Browne and Kirwan, viz. :—

For Browne—Argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable, langued gules.

For Kirwan—Argent, a chevron gules between three Cornish choughs sable.

'On the Fair Green of the village of Abbey, a short distance from the abbey ruins, is a square pillar of mason-work surmounted by a stone cross. In one of the faces is a niche which contained a small square slab, now broken and lost. This was erected, long ago, to a man named Darby Tarpey, who dropped dead, or was killed, at this spot.'

Athenry.

[From notes sent us by R. J. Browne, Esq., Kingstown, Co. Dublin, 1896.]

'Oliver Browne (eldest son of Dominick Browne, of Barna, who died in 1596, and was buried in the Franciscan Abbey, Galway) served as sheriff in 1593, and was mayor in 1609; he was succeeded by his son Martin Browne, of Cularan, the builder of the house which formerly was to be seen in Galway, in Abbey-Gate-street, with the armorial bearings of the then owner and those of his wife (Marie Lynch), and an inscription in English and Latin above the handsome entrance, also above the arms, where the names of the man and his wife appear with the letters I.H.S. and the date 1627 between the crests.

‘The Latin inscription, in raised letters, appears to be’ :—

“NIST · DOMINUS · ÆDIFICAVERIT · DOMVS
IN · VAN LABORAVIT · QVI
GANT EAM.”

‘This house is mentioned in O’Hart’s “Irish Landed Gentry,” 1884 edition. The front was pulled down (Mr. Browne says) more than sixteen years ago, and the carved stones placed in a heap in Eyre-square.

‘Oliver Browne, of Cularan, son of Martin above-named, married Julia Lynch, by whom he had three sons and six daughters.

‘Martin Browne, of Cularan, was the eldest (will proved 15th January, 1698); he was succeeded by his son,

‘Robert, of Cularan; succeeded by his eldest son,

‘Martin, of Cularan, born 1707; succeeded by his third son,

‘Dominick, of Kilskeagh and Ashford; succeeded by his eldest son,

‘Robert, of Kilskeagh and Ashford, Ranger of the Curragh of Kildare, born 1789, died 1868, and was succeeded by his eldest son, ‘Robert J. Browne, of Coolarne, Silchester-road, Kingstown, County Dublin (vivens 1896).’

Parish of Kilcummin—Barraderry Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter Fitzgerald.]

‘This churchyard is situated on the west edge of Cashla Bay, and at times gets damaged by high tides: The reason that this and other churchyards in the district are situated so close to the sea, is because it is there only that any depth for burial can be got, further inland being either a rocky surface or wet bog. There is but little of interest to note among the grave slabs: on one is inscribed’ :—

I. H. S.

“Pray for y^e Soul | of IOHN BURKE | died in y^e 60 y^r | of his age 1799 | & IOHN BURKE.”

[A headstone.]

‘Half hidden in the sand, and lying flat, is a slab with the letters in relief, which required a great amount of dockleaf to get them decipherable; the inscription is’ :—

“PRAY FOR THE SOVLS OF OLIVER IOYCS (sic) &
HIS WIFE MARY
LYNCH & POSTERI
TY 3RD IVNE 1741.”

'A short distance from the churchyard to the south, stand the walls of a church built on solid rock. The gable ends and side walls are still nearly perfect; the internal width of the building is $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet, and its full length 51 feet. The walls are between $2\frac{1}{2}$ and 3 feet in thickness.

'A dividing wall, about 2 feet thick, with an entrance in the middle of it, cuts off 14 feet at the west end; there is a plain narrow square-headed window in the south wall of this compartment, and a niche in the opposite wall, like a window too, but it does not open through the wall. There is no window in the west wall. The east window of the church is a trefoil-headed one, of one light, well finished on the outside, and has a square "eyebrow" or dripstone over it; inside the window is splayed and square-headed. Two pointed arched doorways face one another, one in the south and the other in the north wall, just beside the western division wall. The south doorway is well finished with a concave and convex bevelling on the outside; the inside is plain.

'A small plain square holy-water trough projects from the wall just inside the south doorway; in and around it are stuck rags, bits of worsted, &c. In the eastern end of the north wall is a plain narrow square-headed window. At the eastern end of the south wall is a square niche, and another is placed beside the east window on its northern side.

'Just below the east window is a low altar formed by a raised slab; on it are a number of small round pebbles. Stations are performed here on certain days in the week.

'Though there are no interments outside the church walls, yet I am told burials have taken place inside; no headstones nor slabs are visible, but big rough round sea stones are placed over the graves.

'Cut-stone work is used only in the east window, the two doorways, and the holy-water trough; the material is limestone.

'On the 6-inch Ordnance Survey Map, No. 90, of the County Galway, this church is named "Templeinishmacknaun," but on the spot a peasant called it "Tampul-neeve-smookaun."

'According to the County Galway Ordnance Survey Letters, the patron saint's day at this place is the 15th of March, but the saint's name is not given.'

Parish of Millanuin—St. Columbkille's Churchyard, Bawnrockbawn.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This churchyard is situated on the sea shore of Cashla Bay nine miles to the west of Spiddal. It is a wild rocky place with no trace of any church building. The gravestones are all flat slabs of limestone brought from the Arran Islands, as this is a granite district: there are none of the 18th century; the earliest dated stone I could find bears this inscription':—

†
I. H. S.

"Pray for y^e soul | of ROSEY CONELY who | died in y^e 30
y^r. | of his age 1801 MARY CONELY."

'Two other slabs bear the following inscriptions':—

"Pray for y^e soul of | BRIDGET O'DANEL | who died in y^e | 35th year of her age 1807."

"Lord have Mercy | on the Soul of MART. | FOLAN who | died in the 30 y^r. | of her age 1825. | Erected by her son |
BRYAN FOLAN."

'On a flat slab lying near the churchyard gate, is the following inscription, now hard to decipher':—

"Sacred to the Memory of STEPHEN DONOVAN who depart^d. this Life on the 8th day of March 1841 agd. 15 y^{rs}. Here lies my dear & only son permit^d. yet to bloom, but pluck^d.
in haste, ange^{ls} beheld him ripe for future y^{rs}. to come, & called by God's comm^d. a Brother home."

'Built on the north wall of the churchyard is a turret-like monument, into which is inserted a wooden board now greatly decayed; at the summit is a little plain wooden cross. On the board, in slightly raised letters, runs this inscription':—

"O LORD HAVE MERCY ON THE SOUL OF MARTIN COSTELO WHO DEPARTED LIFE
'This and half the above line are illegible.'
MAY 29 1824 MAY HE REST IN PEACE
AMEN THIS MONUMENT WAS ERECTED BY THEIR SONS PAT^k. MARTIN, & EDMOND
FOR THEM & POSTERITY."

'The above Martin Costello, I was told, died on the neighbouring big island of Arran, and was brought over to be buried in his native place. St. Columbkil is said to have landed here on his return from Arran, and a rock like a boat is pointed out as the vessel that carried him across. Low down on the sea shore are two "wells" (Tubbermore, and Tubberbeg) which are covered by the sea when the tide is in; one "well" is a deep hole in a rock, and the other is a hollow under another rock; the former has a few holy fish in it, and the latter is never choked up by the sand. A Pattern is held here on the 9th of June.'

Tuam Cathedral.

[Contributed by the Very Rev. Dean Townsend.]

'On a stained window, high in the south wall, in the east transept of the new Cathedral, between the Bishop's throne and the Communion table, is the following inscription':—

"THOMAS BARO PLUNKET, B.D., nat. Anno Domini 1792. In sedem Episcopalem Tuamensem praelatus Anno Domini 1839. Animam expiravit 1866. Justus memoria sempiterna teneri credens, hoc tamen monumento gratum erga praesulem dilectum animum Car: Hen: Seymour, A.M., aedis Tuamensis Decanus, testari cupit, Anno. Dom. 1871."

'N.B.—A new window was put up, in the east side of the north transept of new Cathedral, after the completion of these notes; this inscription, together with those at the feet of the high stained windows, over the west end porch, it is impossible to read without the aid of a long ladder.'

COUNTY KERRY.

[From the Rev. John C. Ryan, P.P.]

Tralee Parish.

'The following inscription is on an old slab now fixed in the garden wall of the Dominican Convent of Holy Cross, Tralee. I heard of it from an old man, and found it built into a yard wall in a back lane, and had it carefully removed. It was very much damaged, and unfortunately the workmen set it up carelessly, and it fell and received some further damage. It is now fixed into the wall with iron cramps. The following is the inscription':—

"HERE LEYETH THE BODY OF DAVID ROCHE ESQ. CO-NCELLOR ATT LAW WHO DECEASED THE 13 DAY OF
AUGUST ANNO DOMINI
1686 AND THE BODY OF
HIS DAGHTER MARY DEC-EASED IN TE (sic) YEAR 1685."

'On the reverse side of the stone is, apparently, the remains of a cross, with a figure of the Sacred Heart bleeding from the wound of the spear, and the date 1687 in figures about six inches long and very deeply cut.'

COUNTY KILDARE.

Castledillon Churchyard.

[From the Earl of Mayo.]

'Here there is a rudely incised slab, broken in two, on which was depicted a priest in full canonicals, cope, alb, &c., with the hands (not crossed); the face of this effigy is quite obliterated.

'Here also there is a stone bearing the following inscription':—

I. H. S.

"This Burial Place | belongs to CORNELŪS | SPPELLICY & posterity | where lyeth ye body | of ANN SPPELLICY who | died Aug^t ye 1st 1758 | adge 15 allso lieth | LESTHER and JOHN SPPELLICY."

'No burials have taken place in this churchyard for many years. It is unprotected by any fence, two fields distant from a boreen. Some traces of an old building may still be found in the churchyard.'

Cadamstown Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter Fitzgerald.]

'This churchyard lies in the barony of Carbury in the north west of the County Kildare.

'Portions of the walls of the old church are still standing, though they bear no features of interest; the broken remains of an octagonal tubular limestone font lies half buried in the ground outside of, and near the west end of the ruin.

'The name is a contracted translation of the Irish-Ballymacadam, its former designation.

'Inside the ruin is a long slab, with bevelled edges. It bears no inscription, but at the foot, in relief, is a large 'W' and a 'C'.

'Near it is a headstone with this inscription':—

"Here lies | the Body of PAT | RICK DEMPSEY died | Febr'y.
the 4th | 1766 And aged 56 yrs"

'On the north-east side of the graveyard is another headstone thus inscribed':—

"Here lyes MARY | RUTLIDGE who | Departed This | Life
August 21st 1762."

'The next three inscriptions are copied from three slabs side by side at the east side of the burial-ground; as they mark the graves of priests, the inscriptions face the west':—

"Lapide sub raso suffulto (sic) pulvis in pulvorem reversus
R. D. MICHAELIS KENNEDY

'Though this stone is not dated (and probably the inscription is incomplete), Father Farrell may have been P.P. of Ballina in the interval between the death of Father Dominick Dempsy and the time Father Kennedy became parish priest.'

'The next two inscriptions occur on headstones, the former on the south and the latter at the west side of the graveyard':—

'The late Richard More-O'Farrell of Ballina House erected a mausoleum of cut limestone between the church ruins and the priests' graves over the spot where the last of the chiefs of the O'More Sept are buried: au inscribed slab is built into the west wall of the interior, and is ungetatable, while a slab in the outside of the east wall bears the inscription given below :—

‘By the marriage of his great grandfather with Letitia, only daughter and heir of James O'Moore of Ballyna, the present Mr. Ambrose Moore-O'Farrell is the representative of the chief of the O'More Sept.

‘During the building of the mausoleum mentioned above, an old tombstone was discovered buried in the ground; it bears a long inscription in rough lightly incised letters, and about the middle of the slab (which measures 26 inches in breadth) is a coat-of-arms also very lightly incised. This slab is now secured in a stone frame, and stands against the interior of the west wall of the ruin; this necessary and good act for the preservation of the stone was brought about by the late Mr. Richard Moore-O'Farrell of Ballina.

In the above curious inscription many of the letters are conjoined.

TRANSLATION.

'Here lies Barnabas O'Kelly of Cadamstown grandson of Ferdinand O'Kelly, lord of Iry O'Kelly and Carrig Dunamase in Leinster; who had to wife Ellenor, daughter of Roger O'More of Ballina, Esquire; by whom he had issue six sons who were killed in battle, with the exception of Gerald O'Kelly, ensign of Charles O'More's company, who married Elizabeth, daughter of James Baggott and Celia Power, of Rathjordan in the Co. Limerick. She was granddaughter of the Viscount Muskerry, and of Sir William Power, Knight, of Kilblane.'

'In the above inscription there are one or two points to be explained':—

- '1. Iry O'Kelly and Carrig Dunemas are places in the Queen's County. The latter is now the well known Rock of Dunamase between Stradbally and Maryborough.
- '2. The O'Mores of Ballina were the chiefs of Leix, whose territory in Queen Mary's reign helped to form the present Queen's County. The Roger O'More here mentioned was the famous Rory O'More of 1641 fame; his son Calvagh, or Charles, O'More was in command of a Regiment of Infantry in King James' Irish Army and fell at the battle of Aughrim on the 12th of July, 1691 (vide p. 823 of Dalton's "King James's Irish Army List").
- '3. The Viscount Muskerry here mentioned was Cormac Oge McCarthy, who was so created on the 15th of November, 1628; his son Donough was created Earl of Clancarthy in 1658, but the title was forfeited by Donough the 4th Earl, owing to his adhesion to James II.
- '4. There is a mistake made in calling the King-at-Arms in 1603 John St. George, as it should have been Richard St. George, who was appointed Norrey King-of-Arms (an English office) in 1603 and held till 1623 (vide History of the College of Arms, by Noble, 1804). My thanks are due to Mr. George D. Burtchaell, M.R.I.A., for the above information.'

Castledermot.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, F.R.S.A.I.]

'The following inscriptions are copied from tombstones in the churchyard at Castledermot, and are all on the south side.

'The first inscription given is from a headstone lying flat, and much sunk in the ground':—

"HEARE LYES | YE BODY OF (sic) MARY BURN |
WHO DEPARTED | HVR LIFE THE 4TH OF | MARCH 1724."

'The next is from a headstone which is broken into two pieces':—

"Here lieth the Body of | WIL^M NOWLAN dec^d April y^e 2nd |
1769 aged 40 y^{rs} Son to | MORGAN NOWLAN late of | Castledermot."

'The third inscription is from a large slab supported on brickwork arches':—

"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF | M^{RS} IOYCE
ADDERLY WIFE OF | M^R THO^S ADDERLY
OF MARCH 1726 AGED 62 YE^{RS}."

'The two inscriptions given below are taken from two slabs, lying flat and much sunken in the ground; both are hard to decipher; the first lies near the south-east side of the church, and the other to the south-west':—

"Here lyes the body of | THOMAS POWER Who | Departed
this Life the 14 | Day of September 1751 | Aged 68."

"HERE LIETH Y^E BODY | OF CHAR^S SHIRALD
W | HO DEPARTED THIS | LIFE AVG Y^E 18 1737 |

'Leaning against the wall inside the parish priest's haggard, is a large limestone headstone; why it is there and not in the churchyard, no one seems to know. On it is inscribed':—

"Erected by
JOSEPH MOLYNEUX Esqr
Veterinary Surgeon 1st Dr. Guds. (sic) in Memory of his beloved Brother WILLIAM MOLYNEUX
of Hobberstown, who departed this Life September 6th 1840

May he rest in peace."

'The stonemason's name is on the stone, viz., "Thomas Cullen, Bagenalstown."

Parish of Kildrought, Celbridge Churchyard.

'This churchyard is situated at the south end of the town of Celbridge; it contains portions of the old church of Kildrought, a part of which is now used as a vault by the Maunsell family, of Oakley Park. Near the ruins is a plain windowless building containing the family vault of the Conolly family, of Castletown. There is only one monument inside, and that a magnificent one. It is almost entirely of white marble; it consists of a pediment on four pillars, and on the base beneath recline two life-size figures in the costume of the period (1729), representing the Right Hon. William Conolly and his wife Catherine, daughter of Sir Albert Conyngham, ancestor of the present Marquis Conyngham, of Slane Castle, Co. Meath. In the apex of the pediment are the Conolly and Conyngham arms impaled, viz.:—

1. 'Argent, on a saltier engrailed sable, five escallops of the field—for Conolly.
2. 'Argent, a shake-fork, between three mullets, sable—for Conyngham.

'In the back of this monument is a long inscription in Latin, in lines of varying lengths, which has already appeared at p. 414, vol. i., of the Report on the Memorials of the Dead.

'The name "Tho. Carter, sculp." is on the base of the monument, which would be an ornament to any cathedral.'

'On a little headstone below the east window of the church ruins, is inscribed':—

"HERE LYETH THE | BODY OF THOMAS |
FENAUGHTY WHO | DECEASED OCTOBER |
THE 20TH ANNO | DOMNY 1717."

'On a headstone at the south side is':—

"This I H S Stone

WILLIAM TILBRI who | departed this Life Decr. | y^e 24th
1739 Aged"

'Owing to the bad slatey quality of the above headstone, the lettering is beginning to peel off.'

'The next three inscriptions are copied from slabs against the south boundary wall':—

"Here lieth the Body of | NICHOLAS FOORD son to THO | MAS
FOORD and ELIZABETH | WARD, who deceased the 6th |
of March 1708."

"HERE LYETH [THE] (broken off)

[From Mr. James R. Fowler, Dublin.]

‘ When visiting the ancient bridge near S. Wolstan’s Priory, built by John Decie in 1308, and known as Newbridge, I thought it as well to visit the ruins of the Priory. They are far up in the demesne, and are locally known as “The Castles.” They consisted of two gate-towers, one small gate, with the piers of another, and a tall ivy-covered tower. Over the door of this latter is an ancient sculpture of a cherub, in (what was once) white marble. It is full size, much battered, and with drooping wings. These, all save one gate-tower and the perfect small gate, are surrounded by the nearly complete antient moat, which still contains water. It has a curious little bridge over it. In the tower is half of an antient font, the missing part is supplied by hideously moulded plaster. There are some sculptured capitals of pillars near it. There is an acorn-shaped ornament in the barhole of the small gate. All these buildings have been carefully preserved by the Cane family (owners of the demesne).

‘ Near the path, by the bank of “ye Anna Liffey,” is a structure known as “The Monument.” It consists of an urn containing what might be flames, on a square pedestal, plainly ornamented at top, and having inscriptions on its four sides. It is on the right bank of the river.

‘On the (presumable) north side:—’

“PMS

ROBERTI CLAYTON CLOGHERENSIS EPISCOPI
CATHERINÆ DONELLAN
CONJVGIS OPTIMÆ”

‘On the south side:—’

“SVRSVM CORDA”

‘On the east side:—’

“AS DYING YET WE LIVE MAY 1 1756.” *

‘On the west side:—’

“RENASCENTVR QVAE JAM CECIDERE CAEDENTQVE QVAE NVNC SVNT.”

‘Dr. Robert Clayton was Bishop of Clogher 1745–1758. He had previously been Bishop of Killala, 1729, and Bishop of Cork, 1733–1745.’

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

Furness Churchyard.

‘Furness demesne lies $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the east of Naas; the churchyard is unenclosed, and lies a short distance away to the back of the house. The walls of the old church are standing, and consist of a small nave and chancel; the windows, doorways, and coigns are all built of a peculiar fossilised spongy-looking sort of a stone; the double-lighted little cut-stone east window is still standing; under the chancel is an arched vault, the entrance to which is covered by a huge slab, but I was unable to discover the name of the family to whom the vault belonged. Near the north doorway lying outside half buried in the ground, is a square granite font-head having the hole in the centre.

‘There are few traces of graves round the ruins, and only two of the head-stones now remaining are inscribed; one leans against the west wall, and bears the letters and date:—

The other is placed against the interior of the south wall, and the inscription on it is:—

* This date, 1756, would appear to be wrong.—[Ed.]

'To the west of the church stands an English yew, which must be of great age, as it measures in girth 13 feet at about 3 feet from the ground; it is now quite hollow.'

Rathbeagh Churchyard.

Some months since, we were glad to see the Board of Guardians of Urlingford (in which union this old burial-ground is situated) take active and successful steps at Quarter Sessions to recover possession of part of this churchyard, which had been improperly seized on by a man who had, it was stated, formed a saw-pit there and kept a donkey in part of the ruins of the ancient monastery. He had also built a coal-house in part of the churchyard, which Mr. Murphy, solicitor for the Board of Guardians, stated contained several monuments of antiquity of the Purcells, Greens, and others. He also said “a more barbarous thing was never heard of in a Christian country than the way in which this man has been treating the churchyard, having his pigs and fowls pulling the bones of the dead out of their graves.”

One of the witnesses stated that there was a “ball-alley” also within the burial-ground—a custom which, we fear, prevails in many of the Irish churchyards where the walls of the ancient churches admit of it, and where probably tombstones are used, as we have seen them, in the floor.

A very large number of ancient burial-grounds are vested in Irish Boards of Guardians; and it would be well if more attention generally were given to their preservation and condition.

We are constantly receiving complaints of the state of burial-grounds under the so-called care of Boards of Guardians throughout Ireland.

 affectionate Father."

'This Lord Norbury was the son of the famous "Hanging Judge"; he was shot in his own demesne, it is supposed by a tenant under notice of eviction named Nolan, who disappeared at that time. Lord Norbury stated he could identify the man who fired the shot, but expired before Nolan, who had been arrested in London, could be brought before him, and consequently, for want of evidence, no one suffered for the crime.'

'The graveyard on the west and south sides is thickly covered with headstones; among them lie two stones of great interest, as they bear Irish inscriptions and ornamental crosses, and interlaced patterns; they have been (inaccurately) illustrated in Dr. Petrie's work called "Christian Inscriptions in the Irish Language," one of the annual volumes of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Ireland. There is also at the west side of the churchyard a splendid and perfect (except for weather wear) specimen of a high cross known as St. Columbkille's Cross; it is covered with panels illustrating the Scriptures, and Celtic designs, and it was only in the month of August, 1895, that an Irish inscription on the lowest panels of its shaft was discovered in a much worn condition by Miss Margaret Stokes.'

'In the west wall of the churchyard is inserted a small slab, on which is incised':—

"In Deo Confide | inde Contentus Sis | Sic Felix Eris |

 produxit Vitam in Firm | ad annos. | ELIZABETH |
 CUPPAIDGE Alias DAFY | his wife, Loveing, | Faithfull,

‘In the Cathedral’ :—

“To the memory of ADAM SCHOALES Esqre. for some years senior Alderman of this Corporation. As a magistrate, as a friend, as the head of a family, throughout the course of a long life, in prosperity and in adversity, no man could be more upright, the fear of God led him to make large sacrifices to integrity, and Providence repaid him even here, but it is humbly hoped has its amplest recompense in a better world. | He departed this life the 6th day of May 1803 in the 84th year of his age. | Also to the memory of his wife ELIZABETH, daughter of the Reverend GEORGE ALCOCK rector of Moville and grand-daughter of the Right Rev. HENRY DOWNES, Lord Bishop of Derry. She was exemplary as a wife and Mother, exemplary as a Christian in mind and spirit as well as in profession. She was a member of the Church of England and in the whole tenor of her edifying life she manifested that pure and peaceful piety which is now so seldom found but in the lives and writings of the venerable dead. She died 24th August 1796 aged 69 years. | The survivors of their 16 children of whom nine lie interred near this place have caused this grateful memorial to be erected. MDCCCXXI.”

COUNTY LOUTH.Carlingford.

[From W. Tempest, Esqre., Dundalk.]

'I send you two or three inscriptions from Carlingford churchyard: they are the earliest I can find. I was greatly struck with the fact that none earlier than 1703 could be found. Carlingford, as you know, was always a most important town in early times, abounding with castles, abbeys, and religious establishments. Can you account for it?

'I also enclose you a rough sketch of a stone marking the burial-ground of a family named SUTER. There is no inscription whatever; and the base or portion in the ground looks as if it had been broken off,—at all events it is quite rough, and not dressed in any way. The stem and head of the centrepiece is raised, and the sides and top are chamfered. I thought at first it might have been an altar-stone, until I examined the foot, and found it broken off.'

Mellifont.

[From F. J. Bigger, Esq, M.R.I.A.]

"The ruins of the great abbey occupy so much of the time of the ordinary visitor to Mellifont, that but little heed is given to the smaller remains that lie around. On a recent visit I came across the following, which I do not remember to have seen noticed before. In a small, very small, triangular plot, walled in, on the pathway leading up to the little belfried church overlooking the abbey, are two gravestones—one, the older, lying flat, the other standing upright. The former is a rough grit-stone, 44 inches long, 22 wide at the head, and 21 at the foot, and 7 inches thick. Upon it is cut the floriated cross here depicted. (Fig 1.) The full details could only be made out from a rubbing, as the stone is very much weathered, and the cross scarcely observable. I was much pleased at being able to trace it, as, in my opinion, this stone may be as old as the oldest part of the abbey itself, having the appearance of a twelfth-century stone. It is also a curious fact to find it so far from the abbey and so near to the parish church, unless it may have been removed from the former to mark a more modern grave.

‘The upright stone (Fig. 2) is small, the inscription being surrounded by a quaint scroll border of leaves. The inscription runs’ :—

“Here | lyeth | the body | of MARY LAN | GDALE departed |
November y^e 23 1715 aged | 60 years.”

‘Except these two stones, I did not observe any gravestones, ancient or modern, at Mellifont, which is a very extraordinary thing, as most of our abbeys are crowded with modern graves, and many of them have some sepulchral marks of their former possessors.’

COUNTY MAYO.

Parish of Murrisk, Murrisk Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, F.R.S.A.I.]

‘Murrisk abbey lies near the base of Croagh Patrick mountain, at the edge of Clew Bay. The following inscription from a headstone was copied by me when at the place in the year 1890 ; it has lately come to my notice when looking through an old note-book’ :—

“Pray for the soul of MURTAGH GUELAN who dyed the 7th
of March, 1712.”

‘To the best of my recollection, the lettering is in relief.’

COUNTY MEATH.

Parish of Balfeghan, Balfeghan Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, V.P., R.S.A.I.]

‘By the roadside a mile to the north-west of Kilcock, lies the churchyard of Balfeghan ; it contains portions of the old church walls, but no feature of interest is now left in them. The eastern end is enclosed as the burial-place of the REYNOLDS family. Two modern monuments are fixed against the wall, with inscriptions to members of the family,—one is a large limestone flag, and the other of marble, erected to the memory of the Revd.

See Journal R.S.A.I., vol. ii., part 2, p. 130, for July 1892. Isaac Butler appears to have been unable to read much of this inscription though seen by him about 150 years ago, when, no doubt, it was in much better order than when Du Noyer saw it.—[P. D. V.]

'Most of the inscriptions in Clontibret Churchyard are given in Shirley's "History of Co. Monaghan." The above, however, is omitted.

'There is a much older stone, now much defaced, from which the earlier names and dates were evidently copied on the later monument, which must have been erected about 1818.'

Errigal-Trough.

'Referring to the curiously-engraved tombstone of the McKenna family which we have given in vol. i., page 467, we would here add that at page 134 of Mr. Shirley's "History of Monaghan"; he gives a small shield with the same design as that received from the Revd. Mr. Maffett, with the stag, the two hounds, the hunter, and the two moons, and tells the story of the supposed "Settlement of the McKennas in the Co. Monaghan at 'Trough.'"

'In 1589 Patrick MacKenna was chief of his sept, and the greatest freeholder in his country. For more about this family the reader is
is repeated in this book at page 291, under Errigal Trough.'

Edengoole, Parish of Ematris, Edragoole.

[From the Rev. J. Wallace Taylor, LL.D., Errigal.]

'About two miles from the village of Rockcorry, in the townland of Edra Guile, there lies a very ancient graveyard. The name Cataptha zhabhal signifies between two prongs, i.e., the place in the river took (Joyce). It is situate on the side of an old country lane, on the top of a high hill.

'There are a number of tombstones and headstones scattered through it, nearly all of them erected to members of the once famous M'Mahon clan, whose seat of government must have been near this.

'A few traces of building almost entirely gone still remain. It is utterly impossible to tell anything about its size or shape now.

'The most interesting tombstone is the one to two brothers M'Mahon, both Bishops of Clogher and Primates of Ireland, given below.

'A 100 yards or so from the graveyard is a fine cromlech, which I am sorry to say is in a fair way of disappearing. The road or lane runs close by its edge, so that two stone supports have in some way or other been removed and broken into fragments, a few of which are lying here still. Before it disappears altogether, I send you a ground plan and photo. with description. It consists at present of seven stones upright on N.; originally there were nine, but two have dropped out and been rolled into the ditch on the opposite side of the lane. Also seven stones on S.; entire length 29 feet, and width at broadest 10 feet. There is only one large horizontal stone at the east end, measuring 21 feet 6 inches in circumference by 4 feet thick.

'There is the usual tradition that it is a giant's grave, and there are traces of excavation probably in search of the supposed hidden treasure. I heard also of a man who lost his eyesight in making these excavations.'

Coat-of-Arms of the M'MAHON of Monaghan.

'Debased heraldry':—

'Two swords in saltire between two bears and two ostriches. Two stars added. The supporters are lions. Crest—An ostrich with snake in its mouth.'

Parish of Killeevan, Drumswords.

[From the Rev. J. Wallace Taylor, LL.D., F.R.A.S.]

'The old parish of "GALLOON," in which this church stands, was very extensive; it spread from the Anna Lee River to the shores of Lough Erne, E. to W., and from the present county boundary to the Ulster Canal,

S. to N., occupying the entire S.W. corner of the Co. Monaghan and a part of Fermanagh adjacent. The present parishes of Galloon, Killeevan, Newbliss, Ematris, Rockcorry, Drum, Currin, and Drummully are all inside its boundaries. It is said the parish Church Gill-Laebhan—Church of Laebhan—was somewhere on the shores of Lough Erne.

‘There are slight traces of remains there, I believe; also at Edragooie, q. v.; also at Shanco and Killeevan, and one here.

‘About three miles from Clones, and the same from Newbliss, stand the ruins of an old church now called Drumswords, from the townland in which it is situated. It is a complete ruin, and in a very deserted lonely situation.

‘The ruins standing are what was once a pretty little country church, with traces of handsome stone mullioned windows. It measures 65 feet long and 25 feet broad, with three windows in each side, a door in the W. end, and one in the north side.

‘A well-remembered outrage occurred here in the year 1828. One David Burke, an Orangeman, was buried here. There was a slight riot at the funeral. That same night the body was disinterred and hung on a tree in the graveyard. The excitement was intense, the yeomanry were called out, and almost every Roman, in the immediate neighbourhood arrested and lodged in jail, where they lay for some time owing to some legal technicalities. The night the outrage was committed was very wild and stormy, and long after it was spoken of as a night in “which the devil’s work was being done—like the night they riz Burke.”

‘Inside the church at the E. end there is an enclosure with tombs’ :—

“Sacred | to the memory of | JOSEPH ROGERS | of Glynch (?) | who departed this life | 7 Feb. 1826, | Aged 72. | Also sacred to the memory | of MARGARET ROGERS | his widow, who departed this life | 9 Feb. 1826, | Aged 82.”

“Sacred | to the memory of | JANE ROGERS | who departed
this life | Aug. 18 1815, | Aged 36. | Also | Sacred to the memory of | THOS. ROGERS | of Glynch, | husband of this above | who departed this life | 3rd Apl. 1829, |
Age 62.”

‘On the W. wall of the church is a mural tablet in slate, in memory of the LEY family of Leysborough, a place now owned by SIR WM. TYRONE POWER, son of the celebrated actor, by right of his wife MARTHA, only daughter of JOHN MOOREHEAD, Esq., M.D.

‘It is totally defaced at present; some years ago it bore traces of a coat-of-arms—a lion rampant,—and this inscription’ :—

“This monument was erected | by WM. LEY of Leysborough in memory | of his father RICHARD LEE Esq. son of |
EMMANUEL LEE, Esqr. & likewise in memory | of his mother MRS. ELIZABETH | LEE who both died in the year of our Lord 1750.”

'In this graveyard are a number of tombstones; amongst them':—

"Here lyeth the body of | VALENTINE BRADSHAW | who departed this life | Sept. 1757 | Aged 72. | ANN
BRADSHAW depd. | this life April 1752."

'This was a well-known family in this part of Monaghan, owning lands near the church, and also in Fermanagh. There are few, if any, representatives.'

"MARY ANN BRADSHAW dept | ed this life ye 2 of | July
1752 | Aged 5."

"Here lyeth the body | of JAMES BRADSHAW | who departed this life | Octr. 28 1778, Aged | 48 years, |
Also his son JAMES | BRADSHAW who died | March 1801
Aged 70 years."

"HERE lyeth the Body of | JOHN DICKSON who de | parted
this life Feb | ruary 7 1745 aged 73."

'Here also are two tombstones erected in memory of different members of the WALLACE family of Corragarry or Clover Hill, maternal ancestors of the writer of these notes. A curious thing about them being that a fall of the church walls completely buried them, and the rubbish being levelled and grass covered they were for some time thought to have been stolen; and only discovered through a man called Moore remembering the fall and seeing the stones beneath it, when he heard the writer, the present representative of the family, was about to institute legal proceedings.'

QUEEN'S COUNTY.

Curraclone Churchyard, Parish of Curraclone.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This churchyard contains the ruins of a modern Protestant church which was replaced by one on another site about half a mile off. It lies 1½ miles to the north-east of the town of Stradbally. A large (now disused) over-ground vault belonging to the WALSH family of Ballykilcavan is situated at the east end of the churchyard. Over the built-up entrance is a small tablet inscribed':—

1794
G. H. W.

'On the south side of the vault is a flat slab with this inscription':—

"Here lieth the Body of WILLIAM KELLY | who departed
this life July ye 21st | 1763 Aged 82 years.

Also his Grand-daughter | MARIA McLoughlin of Cloneybacon."

'Two table tombs, beside one another, at the west end of the ground, bear these inscriptions':—

"Here lieth the Body of HENRY | GREENHAM who departed this life December 22nd 1808 aged 74 | years."

"Here lieth the Body of Miss | ANNE GREENHAM who departed | this life January 4th 1814 Aged 32 | years |
Also her Sister RACHEL COSBY who | departed this life
January 15 1805 | Aged 29 years."

'On a flat slab on the south side of the church ruins is':—

"Here lieth y^e Body of Iames NEA^{le} | dep^d. June y^e 18
1764 Aged 68 years | Also ESTHER NEALE alias STORY
dep^d. 8^{ber}. | 23rd. 1764 Aged 27 years."

'The next inscription is very rudely cut on a small headstone not far from the entrance gate; all the "I's" are like little crosses':—

"HERE LIES THE | BODIE OF CATHERINE |
COLINAN OF MARGARE | COLINAN AND
T
OF | IOHN COLINAN WHO | DEPARTED THIS
LIFE | IN APRIL & MAY | 1727."

Killeslin Parish.

[From C. J. Hobson.]

'The accompanying inscriptions are copied from an old burying-ground near the old road from Carlow to Ballickmoyler, Queen's Co. The burying-ground was formerly a rath; it is now walled in; there are but two inscribed headstones. I had some difficulty getting the name of this place, or rather the spelling of it, as the people living near pronounce and spell it several ways. I am not sure if my rendering is the same as that given in the Ordnance Survey':—

'RATH KILLYNURE.'

"Here Lyeth the Body of DAN KELLY Who Departed this Life 1744 in the 27th Year of his Age and JOHN KELLY his Brother who Departed 1761 in the 38th year of his Age."

Stradbally Parish, Oughaval Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'A quarter of a mile to the south-east of Stradbally, by the road side, is the churchyard of Oughaval, containing an unfinished mausoleum of the Cosby family, which is attached to what little remains are left of the ancient church.

'Austin Cooper, in a Journal kept by him in the year 1782, says of this place':—

"A small distance from Stradbally, well situated on the side of a hill, stands the old Church of Oughvall, with the walls of a modern church erected by the late Lord Sidney, which he thought to have made the Parish Church, but was opposed by the Parishioners who built the aforementioned church in the town of Stradbally; consequently this lies a modern ruin. In a vault underneath the church is a large raised tomb of the Sidney family, wherein the late founder is interred."

'The vault here mentioned is on the ground level, and the tomb inside can be seen through the bars of a padlocked iron gate. The title of Lord Sydney of Leix was created on the 14th of July, 1768, being given to Dudley Alexander Sydney Cosby, Esqr., of Stradbally Hall; in December 1773, he married Lady Isabella St. Lawrence, daughter of Thomas 1st Earl of Howth, but on his death on the 17th of January, 1774, without issue, the title became extinct.

'On the outside of the mausoleum wall, and at the south-west end of it, there is an incised mural slab in connection with the Cosby family, but its position is too high up to be able to decipher the inscription.

'The two following inscriptions occur on headstones on the south-west side of the churchyard':—

I. H. S.

"Here lyeth y^e Body of | JEROM O'BRYAN late of | Ouldmill
Dep^d april y^e | 9th 1795 Aged 5 (sic) years."

"Here lyeth y^e Body of | KELAN FLAHERTY who | Departed
8^{ber} y^e 11 1751 | Age 3 years."

'Along the grave at the foot of this headstone is a slab thus inscribed':—

"Here Ends the ony (sic) Daugh | ter of EDMUND FLAHERTY |

'As an example of tombstones erected by persons before their death, to commemorate that event whenever it should take place, Professor Stephens, writing in 1866, gives the following inscription at Fethard, Co. Tipperary, as an example':—

Kilmanahan Upper.

[From the Reverend R. H. Long, Templemore.]

‘This barony contains the hills and mountains that culminate in Mount Keeper (Slievekimalta), near the Shannon, and gradually diminish as they approach the Suir. It is drained by the Clodeagh and its tributaries (Cromoge and Owenbeg), which for a great part of their course are clear mountain rivers, but become sluggish as they approach the Suir. Kilmanahan seems to mean the little church of the monk; this monk may have been St. Donan, who is said to have founded Toem priory; or a brother of King Cormac MacCullinan who lived at Glankeen. This barony contains the following parishes :—

- ‘1. GLANKEEN (Glen head).
 - ‘2. TEMPLE OUTERAGH (Upper Church).
 - ‘3. TEMPLEBEG (Little Church), in two parts.
 - ‘4. MOYALIFF (Magh Ailbhe = St. Aibe’s plain).
 - ‘5. Part of BALLYCAHIL (Cahil’s Town), part in
 - ‘6. Part of DOON (citadel or fortress), greater part in Coonagh B.
 - ‘7. TOEM or TOEMVERIG (tomb . . . ?).
 - ‘8. AGHACHEW (the field of the branchy tree).

‘(1.) GLANKEEN Old Church is up in the hills, above the town of Burrisoleigh, and in the same glen. Portions of all the walls stand, they were massive; the building apparently was an ordinary oblong. In the portion of the N. wall, on the inside, there is a tablet, and above it the shield of BOURKE and DWYER (the latter is a double-headed eagle). The inscription on the tablet is in raised capitals; it gives some timely advice, and testifies that PATRICK KEVIN made the monument in 1626.

‘This gentleman, it will be noticed, when the inscriptions of this graveyard appear, also made the monument of Abp. MILER MAGRATH (1612), Cashel; and Sir EDMUND WALSH, Bart. (1618), Abbey Owney. On the ground beneath the tablets is a fine altar tomb beautifully engraved in high relief (the letters capitals), commemorating the family of WALTER DE BURGO.

'No other very old tombs are amongst the numerous ones in church and churchyard; the latter is surrounded by a good low wall.'

'(2.) GLANKEEN New Church.—Lewis says this "is a plain building erected about 1776, and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have lately granted £147 for its repairs." It is situated in the town of Burrisoleigh, about one mile from the old church. The parish was united to Kiltithmone, in ———, so that the church is now going to ruin, and the glebe is occupied by a Roman Catholic farmer. The churchyard is surrounded by a good high wall; there are only two or three graves apparent in the yard (1893).'

'(3.) The Church of LEIGH, in this parish of Glankeen, was situated on a height above the little village of Annefield; it has, I believe, disappeared; the yard is a small round enclosure; though I saw it from Annefield, I did not go up the hill to it.

'I may here remark that the remarkable bell called the "Barnaan Cow-laun," that belonged to the brother of King Cormac MacCullinan, went from this parish to the British Museum.

'(4.) There is a third old church in this parish marked on the Ordnance Survey Map near the road between Burrisoleigh and Nenagh, but when I went to look for it, I could only hear of a place where I was told people were buried in the time of the Famine. I could hear of no church thereabout.'

'2. TEMPLE OUGHTERAGH.—In this large parish I can find no church marked on the Ordnance Survey Map, but Lewis says "some remains of the old church exist."

'3. TEMPLEBEG consists of two small parcels of land, but no old church is marked in either of them.'

'4. MOYALIFF.—In this parish there is an old and a new church; the latter is the only church in use in the "Upper" barony.

'(1.) The parish church that is now used "is a plain structure, towards the erection of which the Board of First Fruits contributed £300, in 1790 (2.) There are some remains of an old church."—[Lewis.] The parish is united to Holy Cross, and the minister of this union officiates.'

'5. BALLYCAHILL.—The old church in this parish is just outside the bounds of the barony. According to Mr. John Davis White, the walls are still standing, and the graveyard is enclosed. Within the graveyard is an enclosure belonging to the ARMSTRONG family, outside the east window. There is another enclosure at the west end of the church, and the yard is full of monuments.'

Doon Parish.

'6. In the part of DOON parish within the Barony, there is no church. "Twelve townlands of this parish are in the Co. Tipperary"—(Lewis)—the rest of it (a greater part and the church) is in Co. Limerick.'

'7. TOEM, is a long straggling parish extending N.E. and S.W.; at the southern end of it is the church, near Cappagh White. According to John D. White, St. Donan probably founded the priory here for "Canons Regular"; under the Church of Rome the priory became a cell to the Abbey of Inchenimeo, and thus continued till the Reformation.

'The church built by John White, of Cappagh White, about the year 1695, was probably (according to John D. White) built on the site of the Priory. The vault of the White family is under the church. The latter church was demolished and a new church built on its site about 1834. In the meantime divine service was held at Cappagh House. Again this church was also a few years ago taken down, and a new building in Donohill became the parish church.

'Lewis says: "the church is a small dilapidated building" (evidently referring to that built 1695), and that "Toemaline house (about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of church) was formerly the Priory of Canons Regular, and a cell to the Abbey of Inchenemoe," in the parish of Doon.'

'8. AGHACREW is a small parish of only 364 acres, in which there is no old church. It was part of the archbishop's mensal.'

'MEMORIALS OF THE DEAD WHICH HAVE CEASED TO EXIST.'

"HERVI DE MONT-MARREIS ended his days at the age of seventy-five as Abbot of his own Monastery at Dunbrody, in this County. In that extensive and important establishment, his nephews GEOFFROI DE MARREIS and HARLEWIN, Bishop of Leighlin, erected to his memory a mausoleum of black Kilkenny marble, ornamented with columns, surmounted by a statue of the Martial Abbot, clothed in priests' vestments, beneath which, at the neck, was visible the cuirass of a knight. The right hand reposing on the breast held a chalice, while the left grasped a baton, to indicate that the Abbot had once been Marshal of the Anglo-Norman Army in Ireland.

"JEAN DE CURCI, Earl of Ulster, married AFFRECA daughter of GODRED, Scandinavian King of Man and the Western Isles. 'INSCRIBED TOMBS IN THE CORRIG CHURCHYARD, ENNISCORTHY.'

'Last May I spent a couple of days in carefully exploring the above moss-grown cemetery, once the burial-ground attached to St. John's Priory, founded in 1232, by Gerald Prendergast, known as "The Corrig," about a mile and a-half from Enniscorthy; and I took down in my common-place book twenty-two inscriptions. However, as twelve of these only dated from 1830-1850, they are of no particular interest to the antiquary, and so I determined to preserve ten of them. For the sake of accuracy, I paid another visit to "St. John's" some weeks ago, and it was fortunate I did so, because three of the ten oldest epitaphs were almost undecipherable, and in twelve months or less will be completely so. The graveyard has been disused for some years past, but an interment took place there last February among the Wilkinson tombs. The following are the ten epitaphs in chronological order':—

death does not appear to be entered on the inscription; by the Parish Books it occurred about 1816, as his last entry in the Parish Register is dated May 7th, 1816. [See vol. ii., p. 566, Memorials of the Dead.]

MONUMENT IN THE NORTH TRANSEPT OF
ST. MARY'S CHURCH, NEW ROSS,
TO JOHN WHITE, 1569, AND TO HIS WIFE JOHANNA, 1591
From a rubbing taken in 1896.—P.D.V.

"ROBERT HORNOCK, of John's Hill, Fethard, died 19th Jany., 1882, aged 53 years."

"ALICE COMERFORD, of Fethard, died 21st August, 1879, Aged 31 years." [An upright stone.]

New Ross.—St. Mary's Church.

The handsomely carved tombstone represented in the annexed Plate, is in the south transept of the old abbey church, of which the walls only now remain. The inscription, which is in Gothic characters, runs round the edges of the stone; it is in contracted Latin, and the figures in the dates are very peculiar. It reads:—

"*Hic . jacet . Johanes . white .
quod . burgensis . ville . de .
ross . q . obiit . 29 . die .
martii . a° 1569 et .
Joana . | G [?] . . . ai [?]
uxor . ejus | q̄ obiit . xi .
[stone broken] . . . ruary .
1594 . quoru . amabus .
propu [?] ictur . deus ."*

A handsome foliated cross extends the whole length of the stone, which is about 6 feet long by 3 feet wide.

A break in the stone has so injured the wife's name as to make it illegible. Perhaps it was Galway?

The Whites were long connected with Ross—a Francis White was Sovereign in 1590, and Patrick White was Mayor under King James the 2nd's new charter.

Tintern Abbey.

Of this Abbey, O'Donovan, in the Ordnance Survey Papers, written about 1840, says:—

"William Earl of Pembroke being in great danger and peril at sea, made a vow to found an abbey in that place where he should first arrive in safety, and this was the Bay of Tintern."

The church he calls "St. Kierans."

Archdall, in his "Monasticon Hibernicum," p. 752, says :—

"The founder of this Cistercian abbey came from Monmouthshire, and died in 1219."

Tintern Parish.—(Union of Fethard.)

Ryan, in his "History of the County Carlow," p. 362, gives the following inscription from a tombstone in Tintern Abbey:—

"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF SIR ANTHONY COLCLOUGH KNT., ELDEST SON OF RICHARD COLCLOUGH OF WOLSTANTON IN STAFFORDSHIRE, ESQR., WHO CAME FIRST INTO THIS LAND THE 34TH YEAR OF HENRY VIII, AND THEN WAS CAPTAIN OF THE PENSIONERS, IN WHICH PLACE, AND OTHERS OF GREAT CHARGE, HE CONTINUED A MOST FAITHFUL SERVITOR DURING THE LIFE OF EDWARD VI, AND QUEEN MARY, AND UNTIL THE 26TH YEAR OF OUR MOST NOBLE QUEEN ELIZABETH, AND THERE DIED THE 19 DEC. 1584. HE LEFT BY HIS WIFE CLARE AGARE, DAUGHTER OF THOMAS AGARE, ESQR., SEVEN SONS, FRANCIS, RADCLIFFE, ANTHONY, SIR THOMAS COLCLOUGH, KNT., JOHN, MATTHEW, LEONARD; AND FIVE DAUGHTERS."

"Sir Thomas, just mentioned, succeeded to the estates of his father [who had received a grant of Tintern Abbey and its appurtenances from Queen Elizabeth], and died 23rd August. 1624."

Tintern.

In the much-neglected unkempt burial-ground, surrounding the church at this place, is the following :—

"Underneath this stone are deposited the | remains of Mrs.
MARTHA COLCLOUGH wife of CAESAR COLCLOUGH of New

Ross who departed this life the 31st day | of Decembr.
1802 aged 56 years. Also the remains of MRS. MARTHA KIDD wife of RICHARD KIDD of Wexford Esqre. who departed this life the 12th of January 1819 aged 21 years."

Wexford Town.

[From Mr. Benjamin Hughes, of Wexford.]

'The cemetary attached to the Franciscan Church, Wexford, has been looked on for many years as the burial-ground for the mercantile population of the town. So far back as 1833, a grave space could not be procured in it. At that time the Rev. George Murphy, then curate of Wexford, afterwards parish priest of Tintern, obtained a piece of ground for the building a residence for the clergy, gave a portion of it for the purpose of enlarging the graveyard. This part is now fully taken up. None of the headstones or tombs are very old. At the entrance, through the small doorway, there stands a monument bearing the following inscription':—

 "The Friend of the Poor
 Lies here
 The good man
 and Zealous Minister of Religion
 The REV. MICHAEL MURPHY
 Curate of Wexford
 He died on the 15th September 1820
 Aged 41 years
 The Inhabitants of Wexford
 Admireing his Virtues
 And grateful for his many Services
 Have dedicated this humble monument to his Revered Memory
 Requiescat in pace."

'The Rev. Michael Murphy was born at Ballinoulart, in the parish of Donoghmore, barony of Ballaghheen North. He was brother of the Right Rev. Myles Murphy, Bishop of Ferns, 1850-1856, and of the Rev. Laurence Murphy, who died in 1847, in Kilkenny. Formerly, in Wexford, if questions asked about any particular thing, such as marriages, births, &c., the answer given would be it occurred a certain time before or after Father Michael's death, his memory was so revered. The monument is in good preservation.'

'In another portion of the same graveyard, is a tomb with the following inscription':—

“Here snatched by early death JOHN BROWNE was laid

A.D. 1809, Sept. 27, etat 20 years

Him followed ANNE, a gentle pious maid

A.D. 1811, April 22nd, etat 26 years.

Here, too, their venerable parents lie

Who proved how Christians ought to live and die

For ALICE next to Christ resigned her life

A.D. 1812, Dec. 31st, etat 52 years—

And THOMAS soon rejoined his faithful wife

A.D. 1813, January 31st, etat 62 years—

Through love and grief their children laid this stone

Both parents watchful tenderness to own

With prayers, kind stranger, speed them on their way

Towards the blest dawn of Heaven's consoling day.”

‘Close to the large gate or entrance to the same churchyard, formerly stood a headstone, which usually attracted attention, owing to it having a drawing of a globe on the top, with a hand pointing to it, in place of the usual religious emblems’ :—

“Lament him Learning—

Science droop thine head,

And tell the World

That SINGWALL DUGGAN is dead.

Died 22nd September, 1826,

Aged 78 years.

Requiescat in Pace—Amen.”

‘Duggan was one of Wexford's old schoolmasters, and a man noted at the time, as a teacher of navigation. The stone was erected by his pupils, one of them being the Rev. Wm. Moran, P.P., Clongeen. The inscription was written by another, Mr. William McGuire. The grave remained undisturbed until the 31st August, 1881, when it was opened for the interment of Mr. Timothy O'Connor, son-in-law of Mr. McGuire. The stone was then taken up, and placed down in the grave for Mr. O'Connor's coffin to be laid on it, thus removing what might be called “an old land mark.” James Barry, a law Clerk, in Dublin, a pupil of Duggan's, sent the following to the Wexford Independent, on hearing of the death of his old teacher’ :—

“Full many a Bard pay what he deems due,

To the high, the titled, the lovely, the brave,

But where are the Bards, at least they are few,

That flings one wild flower on poverty's grave

Our island of sorrow owns many a grave

Where the minstrels might pour their tenderest strains;

One little garland, oh ! let me wave
 O'er the spot that holds poor Duggan's remains
 Years have rolled on since I gazed on that spot
 Where the tears I saw fall were tender and true
 His was a mind that could rise o'er his lot,
 A gentleman, scholar, and patriot too."

COUNTY WICKLOW.

Ballynure Parish.

'The ruins of an old castle are still visible in Grange-Con demesne town-land.

'In the garden of Grange-Con House is to be seen a stone which is described in the (Ordnance Survey?) Name-book, as being 7 inches thick,

1 foot $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches broad, and the same in length, and having this inscription :—

GODS : STR
 LENGTH : IS :
 MY : DEFE :
 NCE : 1621 .
 H  H

‘The letters are raised.’

—(Ord. Sur. Letters, R.I.A., p. 99.)

P. D. V., 1895.

Sir Arthur Vicars, Ulster, informs us that he some few years since had the stone above described, and which had been knocking about from place to place, cemented into the gable of the old castle in Grange-Con demesne, in which wall, high up, there is another dated stone, engraved :

A.D. 1728 H  H.

The fret between the letters H. H. is the Harrington knot or badge. The Arms being sable, a fret, arg., the letters H. H. are for Sir Henry Harrington, who was the owner of, and lived at, Grange-Con.

Sir A. Vicars further says that Grange-Con at one time belonged to the Abbey of Baltinglass, then to the Eustaces, and, on their attainder, to the Harringtons, and then to the Mahonys. He adds :—‘I fancy the 1621 stone must have belonged to an older castle at Grange-Con, on the site of which the one with the date 1728 was built, and that it was probably over a door or gateway.’

Delgany New Churchyard.

[From Rev. R. S. Maffett.]

‘Kilcoole contains most of the memorials belonging to the family of Mr. Scott, of Ballygannon ; there are, however, three in this churchyard.

‘Near the Hodson vault is a white marble upright stone’ :—

"IN MEMORY OF"
JULIA ARABELLA
 BELOVED AND FAITHFUL WIFE
 OF
JAMES EDWARD SCOTT
 OF BALLYGANNON
 DIED JULY 23RD, 1888,
 AGED 70 YEARS.

"BLESSED ARE THE DEAD WHICH DIE IN THE LORD."—REV. 14, 13.

'Adjoining the above are two upright grey stones; these are low in height, and the upper part of each is sloped at both sides so as to form an angle at the top':—

"HERE LIE THE REMAINS OF JAMES SMYTH SCOTT, Q.C.,
 OF DELGANY,
 THE SECOND SON OF
JOHN PENDRED SCOTT, ESQ.,
 OF BALLYGANNON,

BORN MARCH 23RD, 1782. DIED JULY 11TH, 1854.
 "MORE THAN CONQUERORS, THROUGH HIM THAT LOVED US."

'Second stone':—

"ALSO OF
LOUISA SCOTT
 WIDOW OF JAMES SMYTH SCOTT, Q.C.,
 THE THIRD DAUGHTER OF
 THE HON^{BLE} CHARLES BRODRICK
 ARCHBISHOP OF CASHEL,
 BORN DECEMBER 21ST, 1793, DIED JUNE 10TH, 1864.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

NOTICES.

EXTRA copies of this Journal can be had by application to Colonel P. D. VIGORS, Holloden, Bagenalstown, Co. Carlow; also copies of the Indices for Vols. I. and II.

The Editors beg to draw the attention of those who kindly furnish Notes for publication, to the importance of the following points:—

1. To write on one side only of the paper.
2. To use sermon-size paper.
3. To leave a margin on the left edge, from 1 to 2 inches in width.
4. All names of persons and dates should be written with extra care.
5. All Inscriptions should be copied verbatim et literatim, and as nearly as possible in the same form of letters as the original, each line being separated by a stroke, thus |.

The Editors wish it to be distinctly understood that they are not responsible for errors in copies of Inscriptions sent them; to avoid such, they trust the writers will take extra care before forwarding their MSS.

They also beg that their friends will read the wise words of "Weever," in the annexed paragraph, and, further, that they will act on them—more they cannot say:—

"Now generous reader, let me intreat your furtherance thus farre, that in thy neighbouring churches, if thou shalte finde any ancient funeral inscriptions, or antique obliterated monuments, thou wouldst copie out the one, and take so much relation of the other as tradition can deliver; as also to take the inscriptions and epitaphs upon tombes and grave stones, which are of those [or later] times; and withall to take order that such thy collections, notes, and observations may come safely to my hands: and I shall rest ever obliged to acknowledge thy paines and curtesie."—WEEVER.

Subscriptions are due on 1st January each year.

Life Subscription £5.

Annual do. 5s.

Or £1 may be sent to cover four years' subscription.

Those who are interested in the continuance of this work, are requested to use their influence with their friends in getting additional subscribers. The work has now so increased in size, that it becomes absolutely necessary to have additional subscriptions, to enable the Editors to continue to issue Reports like those of this year, the expense of which is considerable, even without the illustrations, which latter they are most desirous not to have to discontinue. There is no lack of materials. The only difficulty is the insufficiency of the Fund, for want of additional subscriptions.

N.B.—It will save the Editors a considerable amount of trouble, and also economise the Fund, if those ladies and gentlemen who have not as yet paid their Subscriptions, will forward them on receipt of this Notice, without further application. Subscriptions are due on 1st January in each year.

"Let it be remembered that this work is intended to be, not a mere temporary vehicle of amusement, but a permanent storehouse of authentic information, to which reference may hereafter be confidently made."—Anon.

"Time corrodes our epitaphs, and buries our very tombstones."

"Away from the tumult and passion ;
Away from the care and the strife ;
Away from the folly and fashion
Pervading the city's gay life."

WHERE ARE WICKED FOLK BURIED ?

'Tell me, grey-haired sexton,' said I,
'Where in the field are the wicked folk laid ?
I have wandered the quiet old graveyard through,
And studied the epitaphs, old and new,
But on monument, obelisk, pillar, or stone
I read no evil that men have done.'
The old sexton stood by a grave newly made,
With his chin on his hand, his hand on a spade :
'Who is the judge when the soul takes its flight ?
Who is judge 'twixt the wrong and the right ?
Which of us mortals shall dare to say
That our neighbour was wicked who died to-day ?'
'In our journey through life, the farther we speed,
The better we learn that humility's need
Is charity's spirit that prompts us to find Rather virtue than vice in the lives of our kind.
'Therefore good deeds we record on these stones ;
The evil men do, let it rest with their bones ;
I have laboured as sexton this many a year,
But I never have buried a bad man here.'

PREFACE.

ITH this Journal we close Volume III., containing nearly 600 pages, and 55 Illustrations; and with this year (1898) we enter on our second decade, with good hopes of a future in every way prosperous. We have an increased number of Subscribers, and consequently an addition to our funds, together with more literary contributions and a wider field of information.

We agree with the writer from whom we quote :—

"I cannot forbear to mourn a little when old names vanish away, and new come in their place,—

Wonder not, mortal, at thy quick decay—

See, men of marble piecemeal melt away,

When whose the image we no longer read,

But monuments themselves memorials need."

— "It is not without pleasure, and perhaps it may be not without use, that we rescue some quaint old document from the dust of ages; and that we arrest the floating memories of men and things, as they pass down the stream of time toward the ocean of oblivion."

Our object in striving to put on record the fast fading inscriptions on the tombstones of Ireland, is that they may be preserved for future generations. We are only carrying out the order given (in Isaiah) to the children of Israel, where it is written :—

“Now go, write it before them in a table and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever.”

We have much pleasure in informing our Subscribers that Lord Walter FitzGerald, M.R.I.A., F.R.S.A., member of the Councils of the Royal Irish Academy and the Royal Society of Antiquaries, and Mr. Reginald M'Clintock Dix, M.R.S.A., have kindly consented to join the management of this Journal; and we congratulate our members on having obtained the active co-operation of such accomplished antiquaries.

Irish Church Plate.

 I wish to bring under the notice of those who read these pages, that I am at present engaged in collecting full particulars of the Church Plate of this country, of ALL DENOMINATIONS ; and I shall be particularly obliged for any information that is kindly sent to me, with verbatim copies of the Inscriptions and of the "Hall," or other marks, on the several articles, as well as information of their height and diameter in inches, and, when convenient, their weight in ounces and pennyweights. Photographs or sketches of Chalices are also requested, and information whether they are silver, or plated, or pewter, or other metal.

The constant sale of ancient Church Plate, and its loss from one cause or another, make it very desirable that a list with the above information should be prepared and published.

I am aware that many Chalices, &c., of ancient date are in possession of private families, and I am particularly anxious to be furnished with an account of these.

I may add that I have already on hand the particulars of over 200 different sets of Church Plate, belonging to the Church of Ireland and the Roman Catholic Church and to private individuals, and dating as far back as the year 1494.

It is my intention to give Illustrations of the oldest and most remarkable examples that come under my notice.

Duncane Parish.

We are indebted to Robert Cochrane, Esq., F.S.A., for the following, for which we beg to thank him. It appeared in one of the daily papers, and was extracted therefrom by him for our Journal :—

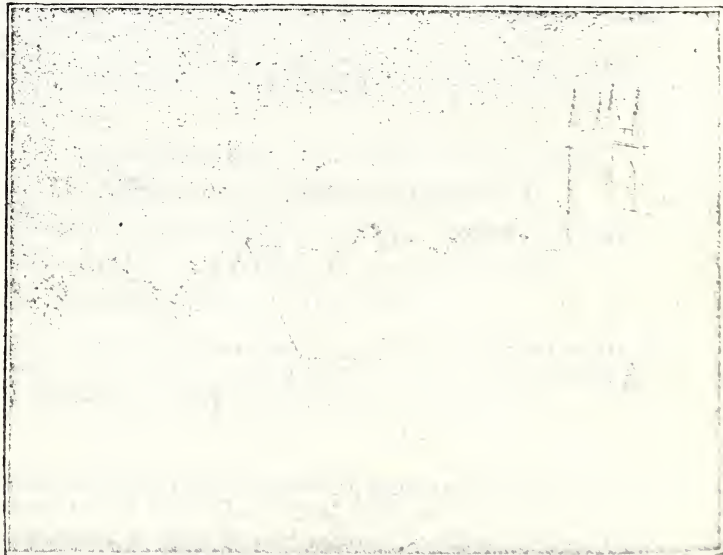

"A curious epitaph. Inscriptions on tombstones are always receivable as evidence of pedigree. An inquiry as to the heir-at-law of that interesting personality, the late Mr. John Carey, of Toomebridge, County Antrim,

* DEAN GREENE was the eldest son of ROBERT GREENE, of Dublin (by his first wife, JULIANA JUDGE), who was the eldest son of WILLIAM NASSAU GREENE, of Carlow, the third son of GODFREY GREENE, of Greenville, Co. Kilkenny.

remembered for having erected a Temple of Liberty in that county, has led to the discovery of a remarkable epitaph, which was referred to in this column yesterday. The epitaph is inscribed on a headstone in Duneane Churchyard, County Antrim. Here it is :—

“ Designed and erected by JOHN CAREY, of Clougher, Duneane, in memory of his father, who died in 1833, at 70 ; of his mother MARGARET, who died in July, 1845, at 76 ; of his brothers, JAMES and WILLIAM, who both fell by fever in the fatal November of 1839, respectively 45 and 36 years. Biography of JOHN CAREY. He was born on the 15th day of June, 1800 ; died ——. In his life he was most ingenious, persevering, and benevolent ; in death an example to all for those great moral virtues. Lineage of JOHN CAREY—A very ancient race variously settled in York and Devon ; England and Scotland, with Irish branches at Innishowen and Dungiven ; renowned for courage, equity, and learning ; honoured with many eminent State offices ; elevated to the several peerages of Hudson and Falkirk, Monmouth and Devon ; claiming kindred with the highest ranks of the empire, and a nuptial affinity with the Crown itself since the sixteenth century. Decus Priscus. See Burke's Landed Gentry.”

Parish of Glenavy, including Camlin and Tullycrusk.

‘ Glenavy church, built in 1812, cost £450 according to Erck ; but Mr. Ewart gives the date of consecration 1814, and the cost £1,080—a wild difference from Erck, who gives the date of the glebe-house as 1819, and the cost £800.

The following notes are taken from Mr. Ewart's handbook, 1886 :—

‘Incumbent—Rev^d. CHAS. WATSON, A.M., ind. 1885.

‘Curate—Rev^d. WILLIAM MUNCE, M.A., appd. 1885.

‘This parish was formerly called Lynavy, or the “Glen of the River”; it is bounded on the west by Lough Reagh.

‘The date of the union of the above three parishes is uncertain, but from a Regal Visitation book it appears the union existed in 1633.

‘The old church of Glenavy had neither tower nor spire. Its porch bore the date 1644. The wards of the key of this parish church form the initials of the Rev^d. Ed. Cupples, the vicar, in 1812, when the present church was built. A transept was added to it in 1863, costing £440.’

‘The church of Camlin or Crumlin is a venerable ruin, overgrown with ivy; and is situated on the verge of the parish, on a precipitous bank overhanging the river of Crumlin, being distant about quarter of a mile from that town. It is seventy-seven feet long, and twenty-three wide. Although the present floor is on a level with the adjacent ground, the original one appears to have been much beneath it; for there are arches and niches running along the walls, and the present floor rises to the top of them, at a short distance from the roof. The windows are immediately above these arches: that on the east is a long, narrow aperture. A few individuals still continue to bury in the graveyard.

‘There are no remarkable monuments belonging to any of these churches.

‘The chalice of the communion-table, which is of silver, has the following inscription :—

*“This plate was given to ye Church of Glenavy, by the Officers of ye Queen’s Regiment of Horse, commanded by ye Hon^{ble} Major-General
SIR JOHN LANIER, in the yeare 1690.”*

“In honorem Ecclesiae Anglicanae.”

‘When Duke Schomberg was stationed at Lisburn, a detachment of his army was quartered at Glenavy, and being well treated by the inhabitants, this chalice appears to have been given in acknowledgment.’

‘The records of the union are: a registry of baptisms, marriages, burials, and acts of vestry, in one volume, commencing in the year 1707; a registry in parchment, of baptisms and marriages commencing in the year 1813; and a book, containing the acts of vestry, commencing in the year 1814. The registry of burials is still continued in the old book of 1707. These records are kept in the church, under lock and key.

- 'PARISH OF CAMLIN.

'The Roman Catholic chapel is a neat modern building (1816), 60 feet long by 30 wide; and is situated in the townland of Ballymacrickey, within half a-mile of the town of Glenavy. The Rev. PATRICK BLANEY is the priest. This chapel was built about 15 years ago, by subscription; to which the Marquis of Hertford and the Protestants of the union liberally contributed.'

'The church of TULLYRUSK stood in the townland of that name, being distant from Glenavy about three miles. There is an extensive and well-enclosed churchyard in which the Protestant dissenters and Roman Catholics chiefly bury.'

Note.—Mr. Ewart says no part of this church now remains except the foundation. It was 62 feet long and 18 feet wide.

‘MODERN CHURCH PLATE.

‘A Communion Service of cup, flagon, and paten was presented by Captain Dowglass, J.P., of Golrana, in 1867. The flagon bears the following inscription :—

“ This Flagon with the Chalice and Paten was presented by CAPTAIN DOWGLASS, of Golrana, and his family, to the Parish of Glenavy, in memory of his sister and child.”

‘The oldest parochial record—the Parish Register—begins in 1709.’

‘Mr. Ewart says of Camlin or “Crumlin” : it has a well-kept graveyard [A rare exception to the general run of those that have come under our observation throughout Ireland—ED.], covering half an acre. The church was destroyed in the wars of James II., and the latest interesting event recorded concerning it, is that of an ordination held in it by Bishop Jeremy Taylor, in 1661, when Andrew Acton was admitted to deacon’s orders.’

For a full description of these parishes, we would refer our readers to “The Story of the United Parishes of GLENNAVY, CAMLIN, and TULLYRUSK,” by the present Vicar, the Rev. Charles Watson, M.A., B.D., where much of interest will be found, and we heartily endorse the words of the late Bishop Reeves in a letter on the subject of this little work, written to its author in 1890, in which he says :—

“If only the majority of the clergy of the united diocese would exert themselves with spirit, industry, and benevolence, there would be produced a compilation which would, in the loving hands of LAVENS EWART, set this diocese beyond all comparison in the literary and constitutional rank of A 1 in the diocesan literature of the Irish Church.”

Let us again urge on our clerical brethren the great value of such parochial “stories”—it can scarcely be estimated; and surely amongst our University degree men, of whom we rejoice to think we have still so many in every diocese, we cannot lack the small amount of literary capacity to put together what is interesting and of value in our parishes, neither can the want of time be pleaded, except in cases few and far between.

We for our part will be glad to give any information that is asked us, that can assist the clergy to carry out this much to be desired work.

Parish of Ramoan [Modan's Fort].

‘Mason says there is not any monastic ruin or ancient church in this parish, nor any monument or inscription.

‘There is a curious Irish manuscript in the possession (1816) of CHARLES MACGILDOWNEY, Esq. It is an heroic poem, and the Irish characters are admirably written.

‘The parish church of Ramoan is situated within one mile eastward of Ballycastle, on the inland road leading to Colerain. The ancient church, which was in a ruinous state, was taken down in May, 1812.

‘The second church is that of Ballycastle, to which the writer (the Rev. LUKE CONOLLY) is chaplain. It has a handsome front of cut stone, with a spire 100 feet high; the interior is stained and painted. It was commenced in 1752, and finished in 1756, at the sole expense of Mr. Boyd, great grandfather to the present (1816) proprietor.’

Ramoan Church—Diocese of Connor.

‘St. James's Church,* built in 1848, adjoining the old church, which was twice destroyed by the Danes.

‘The east window is in memory of the Right Rev. RICHARD MANT, D.D., Bishop of Down and Connor [who died in 1849 (?)] ; the other windows are in memory of CHARLES M'GILDOWNEY, of Clare Park, HUGH BOYD and ROSETTA his wife; the Venble. THOMAS B. MONSELL, Archdeacon of Derry; and the Rev. CHARLES HENRY MONSELL. There are also memorial tablets in memory of DANIEL McNEILE, of Clare, and the Rev.

* Is said to have cost £1,500.

WILL. BOYD; Captain JOHN RALPH BLOIS, R.N.; Sir JOHN AUGUSTUS HUGH BOYD, Bart., R.N.; Sir HUGH HARLEY BOYD, Bart., and CATHERINE EMILY BOYD; the Rev. MICHAEL HARRISON, and BRUCE DUNLOP.

‘The old parish church, founded by St. Columba in the sixth century, was the scene of a massacre by the rebels in 1641.

‘The present church is generally considered one of the handsomest churches in the diocese.’

‘FORMER VICARS.

‘Rev. MICHAEL HARRISON, died 1765.

‘Rev. CHARLES HILL, A.B., ind. 1802.

‘(The Rev. DR. NEILL was rector during Mr. Hill’s incumbency.)

‘The Rev. LESLIE CREESY, 1831.

‘The Rev. J. R. PHILLOT, 1835.

‘The Rev. J. B. S. MONSELL.

‘The Rev. W. HENRY BIEDERMANN, Vicar of Egham, Surrey, exchanged with Mr. Monsell, and was instituted Rector of Ramoan in 1853; he resigned the parish in 1877.

‘The Rev. THOMAS COX was ind. in 1879, and still holds the living.’

[From Mr. L. Ewart’s book.]

‘This churchyard is said to contain some very ancient monuments. [We greatly wish the incumbent would kindly copy them for us.—ED.] This statement as to ancient monuments which we have lately received, is altogether at variance from that in the Rev. Luke Conolly’s account as published in 1816 by Mason, where he states that “there is no monastic ruin or ancient church in the parish, nor any monument or inscription.”’

‘The following list of incumbents, taken from the First Fruits’ Records, extends much further back than Mr. Ewart’s list’ :—

“PATRICIUS TALLYS collatus fuit per Robm. Dunen. et Connoren, Epm. ad Vicar de Ramoan, Culfettrin, et Loghgil, 2^o die Sept., 1614.

COUNTY ARMAGH.

Loughall Parish.

[From Mr. C. J. Hobson, Carlow, 1897.]

'Loughall is known far and near as a model village, and its churchyard is kept in splendid style; the entrance to the churchyard is through what was originally the door of the parish church; part of the walls are still standing. In 1641 some terrible events took place within the walls of this old church.

'In the churchyard Protestant and Roman Catholics have equal burial rights, but the burying-ground is now chiefly used by Protestants.

'The Cope monument is situated about the centre of this churchyard, and is of the altar pattern. The inscriptions are engraved on four panels let into each side of the monument; above the bishop's epitaph is a mitre, whilst on the opposite side there is a coat-of-arms.'

Newry.

"This town possesses two churches of the Church of Ireland—St. Patrick's, on the summit of High-street Hill, built in 1578 by Sir Nicholas Bagnal, as appears by an inscription over the west (?) door [See "Memorials of the Dead," vol. iii., p. 62]; it is said to have been the first Protestant Church erected [in Ireland], the others having been Roman Catholic Churches ?

'It was destroyed in the rebellion of 1641; half of it was repaired after the Restoration of King Charles II., and the second half in 1720. It is now a chapel of ease to the parish church, St. Mary's.

'St. Mary's Church in Hill-street is a very handsome edifice of hammersmith granite, in the Gothic style, flanked with buttresses. The first stone was laid in October, 1810, and the church was opened for Divine Service 21st

* Evidently intended for frail.

November, 1819. Its tower and steeple is 190 feet in height. Its length is 75 feet, and width 51 feet, exclusive of the chancel.

'On the outside of the tower under the clock, is a mitred abbot, in his alb, sitting between two yew trees, sculptured in bas-relief. There are several monuments inside, amongst which is one of Sir Trevor Corry, one surmounted by a bust in white marble of the Rt. Hon. Isaac Corry, M.P., and one a full length marble statue of General Davis, with Fame sounding her trumpet, and a variety of chastely sculptured figures.' The cost of this church was £14,000, made up by bequests and donations, one of £4,000 and two of £1,000 each, and others.

'Newry anciently possessed a fine abbey, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Patrick, founded in 1157 by Maurice MacLoughlin, King of Ireland. It was burnt down in 1162. No portion of the building now remains except the abbot's house (the castle of Arthur Bagnal).

'Several fragments of stones with heads and other figures rudely sculptured on them, are to be seen in some of the adjoining buildings; these formerly belonged to the buildings of the abbey.

'The ruins of the abbey were removed about fifty-seven years ago (1790); amongst them were found vast heaps of bones and some fragments of stones curiously carved, stone fonts of rude workmanship, a small brass spur ornamented with carving, and a quantity of cannon and musket balls.'

‘Lewis, writing in 1837, says “The chapel is a plain old building in indifferent repair, and is about to be newly roofed, for which the E. C. have granted £591.”

‘A small chancel has been quite recently added. Ryan gives the following inscription. On granite cut in the rudest manner in Roman capitals’ :—

‘There are several other tombstones in granite of an old date, but the inscriptions contain nothing worthy of note.

‘Within a handsome railed enclosure planted with evergreens, is a raised monument on which are to be found these words’ :—

“In memory of the Rev. HENRY ST. GEORGE, late of Altamont, in the County of Carlow, during forty years rector of this parish, who died May the 30th, 1831, in the 88th year of his age. In every station of his life, he executed its respective duties with judgment, diligence, and fidelity. The purity of his faith, the rectitude of his conduct, and his unwearied labours in the pastoral office testified his piety towards God. His kindness, humility, and candour, with his exemplary attention to the wants, temporal as well as spiritual, of his fellow creatures, proved his benevolence towards MAN.

Reader! behold the upright for the end of that man is peace.”

‘It may be observed, that possibly this and the following inscriptions may be here preserved when decayed, or obliterated in their first situation.

‘In the first vol. of the Report of the Memorials of the Dead, Ireland, and at p. 140, is given a very free translation of the Latin inscription to the memory of the French clergyman, Benjamin Daillon, who died in 1709. It may interest the readers of the Reports to have a literal translation of this curious inscription, and so I enclose one which I obtained from the Rev. John Finlay, Dean of Leighlin:—

“Here is placed BENJAMIN DAILLON, a Gaul sprung from a noble family in Britany. A learned priest of the Reformed church, who had been for a long time imprisoned on account of his religion and was at length expatriated, who after 79 years, in great part spent in pious studies and Gospel work, breathed out his pure soul four days after the death of his wife PAULINE, not buried here.

Tell me, learned spirit of the Muses the pledge of love, tell me if they forbid fame to perish with death, if a captive contending in the fort of Christ, and an exile desires to adorn this city with his remains—why should unconquerable valour, and genius, and arts, and the honour of piety, be at the same time entirely covered in the dusk?

Although the city shall have been forgetful yet shall he not fade from Olympus; he shall live here by my art, and the stone shall proclaim it.

This man died on the 3rd of January in the year of our Lord 1709.”

Particularly to her grandfather, who through Gratitude and Justice here declares that he believes she was the best Child he ever knew, except her mother they united in making life even desirable to him tho labouring under great Infirmary the loss of such a one will be felt as long as we have feeling. But the recollection of every action and Expression of hers from the time she began to have sense to her last hour gives us confidence to trust that she is happy."

Kiltannel Parish.

[From Dr. Ryan's "History of Carlow," 1833.]

'One mile from Kiledmund is the ruined church of Kiltannel, situate in a wild and rude district. Two gables and one side wall, of the coarsest architecture, are standing. There is an arched entrance in the wall, about six and a-half feet high, by twelve in breadth. Ivy covers the walls, and inside is a receptacle for "holy water," of about eighteen inches in diameter.

‘An enclosure, or continuation of the church, stands at the east end, inside which a large ash tree is growing. The following inscription (with a coat-of-arms at top), on a slab indented in the wall, informs us of the history of this subjoined edifice’ :—

“CAPTIN . EDMUND . BYRNE . ERECTED . THIS .
CHAPEL . AND . DOCTOR . EDMUND . BYRNE .
ARCHBISHOP . OF . DUBLIN . CONSECRATED .
YE SAME . IN . YE YEAR . 1709.”

‘On a flat stone are these words’ :—

* “Underneath this stone doth lie
As much Vertue As could Die,
Which when Alive did Vigour give
To as much Beauty as could live.
Her age was four years old, and died last Michaelmas day, 1742. Name, ANN WARREN.”

‘Near the preceding’ :—

“HERE LYETH THE BODY OF TERENCE BYRNE WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 86TH YEAR OF HIS AGE 1711.”

‘In the burial-ground may be found the following inscriptions’ :—

“Erected by Lieutenant JOHN STONE in memory of his father the late Lieutenant THOMAS STONE who was killed by the rebels on the 26th day of June, 1798, aged 76 years.”

“Erected by JOHN SINNOTT of Kiledmond in memory of his beloved father JOHN SINNOTT, Lieutenant of Mount Leinster Infantry, who departed this life January the 7th 1828, aged

COUNTY CLARE.

[Kindly contributed by Thomas J. Westropp, Esq., M.R.I.A., &c.]

'The Heralds, in their Visitations in England during the sixteenth and seventeenth century, often made collections of Armorial Bearings, &c. (from monuments, plate, carvings, paintings, and seals), the value of which, from an antiquarian point of view, bids fair to outweigh much of that of the rest of their work. I venture to attempt a similar undertaking for the families of the County Clare, the condensed results of which, so far, I send to you. The paucity of examples of many noteworthy Celtic families is regrettable. I am unable to give any carving or seal, for example, of the houses of O'DEA, O'CONOR, O'LOUGHLIN, or O'QUIN, who played so important a part in the history of Clare, but hope some other correspondent may be able to remedy this deficiency.'

Killaloe Cathedral.

Some few years ago, one of your editors visited Killaloe Cathedral, and the very interesting stone-roofed oratory which stands a few yards from the north side of the Cathedral, which is attributed to St. Flannan, and in which there is a doorway which Brash believes to have been inserted by King Brian Boroimhe ; both the Cathedral and the oratory were then in good repair and well kept, but the adjoining cemetery was in the wildest confusion. He noticed a most interesting "Finial," which doubtless at one time crowned the gable of the Romanesque Church which preceded the Cathedral, used as the rude headstone of an unknown grave ; and another remnant of that more ancient structure, the beautiful Romanesque arched doorway which is built into the wall of the present Cathedral, and which is so much admired by all antiquarian visitors, was rudely blocked up with masonry, so that it could only be imperfectly seen. If the account which appeared of these buildings in a letter which was published in the Irish Times on the 1st July last be correct, they are not now in as good order as when he saw them, and are suffering much from the inroads of that very picturesque and most destructive creeper Ivy, which nothing but the greatest care on the part of the custodians can hinder from destroying or reducing to shapeless ruin any building to which it attaches itself. We feel well assured that we have only to call the attention of the Bishop and Dean of Killaloe (both of whom are members of the Royal Society of Antiquaries) to this matter in order to have whatever remedial measures that may be necessary taken.

It is not only with regard to Killaloe Cathedral that we would speak, but very generally throughout Ireland the destruction of our ancient ecclesiastical and other buildings by ivy is going on, in many cases under the false belief that it is, if not actually, a benefit!—at least harmless. Nothing can be more erroneous, and we again beg to urge those who have charge of ivy-covered walls, to have the ivy cut at the ground if they wish to preserve the building, or else it may be that when it is too late they will see the error of their ways.

Killaloe.

[From Du Noyer's notes.]

'The font is of yellow sandstone. From its outline the Greek cross on it, and the style of the foliated ornament, part in low relief and part "gravé en creu," Mr. Du Noyer considered it to be the work of the tenth century, if not older, but in this Mr. Du Noyer was mistaken, as the accounts of the Chapter show that it was made in 1701, and probably copied from an old pattern.

Tomgrany Churchyard.

A correspondent has written to us asking if anything can be done to keep this churchyard in a better state than it is. For some years it has been in a most deplorable state, and no one seems to look after it. The church itself is a very old and notable one.

We believe that this parish is peculiarly situated, and we happen to know that the clergyman now in charge is very anxious that this most interesting old church, in which we are told that Divine service has been held continuously from the time that it was restored by King Brian Boru to the present day, should be renovated and put in good order. We would ask him to call the attention of the parishioners to the churchyard, and to remind them that what may seem a “deplorable state” to a stranger, may not, when their eyes have become accustomed to it, attract their attention, so much does familiarity blunt our powers of perception. The northern part, through which the path runs, is sufficiently well kept. The southern part is still used by the peasantry, and is in the last stage of neglect. It can scarcely be seen either from the road or from the church path,—[Eds.]

EPITAPH ON SIR JOHN FITZGERALD'S MONUMENT, CLOYNE CATHEDRAL.

The copy of this inscription as given by Smith, in 1815, varies in several words from that here given [see Smith's "History of Cork," vol. i., p. 136], and he gives the following additional lines:—

“Vivimus heu si tanquam omnes, mors nulla sequatur,
Et ponce infirmi fabula vana forent. Ergo, mors tua
Mors Christi, fraus mundi, gloria coeli, Et dolor inferni Sunt meditanda tibi.”

Cork.

“The French Church,” Cork, in “French. Church-street,” is now a Methodist Chapel.

R. R. Brash is buried here; no tombstone over him with any inscription, but I was informed that two handsomely-carved old chairs which are in the Chapel were given by his sisters in memory of him.

The burial-ground alongside is only about 10 yards square! and has, I think, but one tombstone in it.

A Mr. M'Navan, I was told, could give the best information about the old Registers and Church Plate of this church.

We were informed that there is a Jews' burial-ground on the high land over the River Lee, near General Bowles's place, a short distance from Cork.

‘The floors of the pews rest on cement joists, which cover the portions of the inscriptions marked thus :— * * * * *

‘I have found out nothing more of the history of Captain Biggar than the stone records. Of Sir John Dowdall more is known. If you have O’Hart’s “Irish Pedigrees,” you can see something about him on p. 28 (Allen Family); and on p. 65. “Kilfenny” is in Co. Limerick, I believe. But the following extract from Caulfield’s “Annals of Kinsale” (page 345) will explain how Sir John came to be buried in Kinsale, and in that particular part of the ancient church of St. Multose, where the Southwells were laid to rest’ :—

AT MOURNE ABBEY, NEAR MALLOW, COUNTY CORK.

"SOUTHWELL, SR. THOMAS, of Poulnelong,* Co. Cork, Knt.; died June 12, 1626. He mar. ANN, dr. of Serjeant HARRIS, and sister to Judge HARRIS, by whom he had issue an only dr., ELIZABETH, first mar. to Sir JOHN DOWDALL, Knt., and 2ly to DONOGH O'BRIEN, s. and h. to Sir DONOGH O'BRIEN, Knt."

Mourne Abbey.

Lewis, in describing Mourne Abbey, says :—

'It is also called Ballinamona ; it is $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles south from Mallow, on the mail road to Cork. It was anciently called Temple-Michael, from a Preceptory of Knights Templars founded here in the reign of King John by an Englishman named Alexander de St. Helena.

'The skeleton of the church, said to have been 180 feet long, still remains, but destitute of the mouldings and other ornamental parts of the masonry.'

The annexed drawing [by the late G. V. Du Noyer] is one of the very few examples we have of the sacred fish being represented on a tombstone.

COUNTY DONEGAL.

The following extracts from the Derry Journal, kindly sent us by the Rev. J. H. Steele, we have inserted under "Donegal," as they appear to belong to that county.

Derry Journal, 9th March, 1813.

"Died at Murvagh, Co. of Donegal, Mrs. ALCOCK, wife of the Rev. Dr. ALCOCK, V.G. of Raphoe. In the several duties of life, as a daughter, a sister, a wife, and a mistress of a family, and a kind neighbour to all around her, she had no superior. She died in her 88th year, in a good old age, in every sense of the word."

['The above-named Mrs. Alcock was ANN, daughter of WILLIAM PATERSON, Esq., of Plaister, parish of Taughboyne, County of Donegal (by

* 'Poul-na-long, a castle on the Bandou River, six or seven miles from Kinsale.'—(J. L. D.)

the dau. of — MORGAN, Esq., his wife), and sister of ANDREW PATERSON, Esq., of Mason Lodge, in same parish and county; and of JAMES PATERSON, Esq., of Plaister and Magherafelt.]

Derry Journal, Tuesday, 29th April, 1817.

“At Raphoe, in the 86th year of his age, the Rev. Dr. ALCOCK.
His long life was passed in doing all the good in his power, as a clergyman, as a magistrate, and as a friend.”

‘A silhouette of the Ven. John Alcock, LL.D., Archdeacon and V.G. of Raphoe, is in the possession of the Rev. J. H. Steele, endorsed on the back as follows:—“The Revd. John Alcock, D.D., Rector of Drumholme, and grand-uncle of mine. (Signed), I[SABELLA] MARSHALL.” Mrs. Isabella Marshall was the eldest dau. of Capt. WM. PATERSON, H.E.I.C.S., of Mason Lodge, County Donegal, and 2nd wife of the Rev. GEORGE MARSHALL, Rector of Donagh, in the same county.’

Raphoe.

[From R. McNulty, Esq., Raphoe, 1896.]

‘The following inscriptions are from memorial stones in the church and graveyard at Raphoe. As is well known, the ancient church there was founded by St. Adamnan (Eunan), whose name it still bears. From very early Christian times Raphoe was the seat of a bishop, and after the Reformation it became a Protestant See, George Montgomery being appointed its first Reformed Bishop, in 1605. St. Eunan’s was the cathedral church of the diocese. Parts of the present edifice are believed to have been erected in the twelfth century; and, through the exertions of its present incumbent, Canon Richard Bennett, some beautiful old sedilia have recently been restored, the chancel roof renewed, and windows restored after the ancient style.

‘The font in the church bears the following’ :—

“EX • DONO IOANNIS • POOLEY • S.T.D.
EPIS • RAPOT • ANNO • DOM • 1706.”

‘The first inscription is from a stone in the church, in the north-east corner of the chancel, which appears to mark the burial-place of one of the most considerable of the settlers in the district in the Plantation days.

‘Inscription No. 2 is on a stone near the middle of the chancel, and tells in “quaint Latin elegiacs” of the worth and beauty of the young wife of Dean ADAIR, who himself is described in the Visitation Book of the year 1622 as “an elegant scholar and a good preacher of God’s Word, given to hospitality and good conversation.”

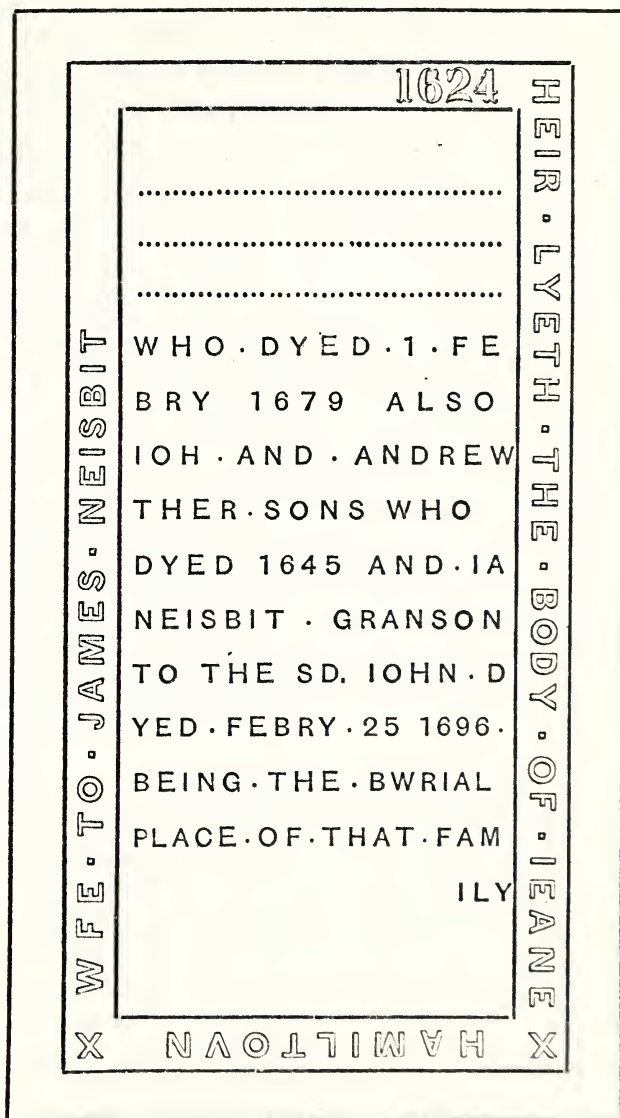

'No 3 is a tablet in the south wall of the chancel, placed in sculptured work surmounted with arms.

'No. 4 is a small plain tablet on the same wall.

'No. 5, a memorial tablet, is the only one in the east end of the chancel, and the next two (Nos. 6 and 7) are placed in the north wall of the chancel. All the others are in the graveyard around the church, and most of them are sufficiently full to require no remarks. I have not ascertained anything as to the family of GORDON (No. 11). ALEXR. MONTGOMERY (No. 13) was a well-known personage in his day; he was ancestor of Col. ROBERT G. MONTGOMERY, of Convoys, Raphoe, an extensive landowner. He was a member of the Irish House of Commons, and a great duellist, many of his exploits being still related by the people of the district, among whom he was popularly known as the great "Sandy Montgomery."

'The last inscription (No. 14) is interesting as shewing the unusual vitality possessed by several members of one family living in the immediate neighbourhood.'

TRANSLATION.

'With great kindness, mourning friends have taken care to place this monument in honour of that most just prelate, and much-to-be-revered man, WILLIAM BISSETT. He had an intellect of gold, and was versed in the refinements of Greek and Latin literature. Nobody was more unaffected; but he was raised by the unanimous vote (of the Chapter) to this bishoprick of Raphoe. Diligent in the administration of affairs, serious, and experienced in exhortation, he was appointed to discharge all these offices of piety; and, though pressingly called to a higher place in the Church of God, he was reluctant to leave this place, with its dear familiar paths. How liberal, how patient he was, in the relief of the poor, in the comforting of the miserable, can be testified by those who were grievously ill of the pestilence seven years ago. They were diligently visited in his spare time, cheered by his voice, raised by his hand. A thousand who have experienced his consolation can testify to his faith "pure and undefiled" in this diocese. Alas for him ten thousand times! He WAS a bishop. He was born on the 27th October, 1758, advanced to the See, 1822, and died 5th September, 1834.'

COUNTY DOWN.

Comber Parish.

[From the Ordnance Survey Papers.]

This parish is situated between Belfast and Downpatrick, seven miles from Belfast. The church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

There was an ancient Cistercian abbey here, founded in 1199. The first monks were from Wales.

The church appears to be an old building; there is no tower or steeple.

The annexed drawing of a monument dated 1633-1637 represents two separate slabs divided by a moulding; they are fixed into the church wall, on the south side, under the second window from the east.

The "W" in the older stone is broken away, but sufficient remains to trace it.

The size of these two stones is 4 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. 3 in.

Mr. L. M. Ewart, in his excellent handbook, states that the old church of Comber was built in 1610, by Lord Montgomery, of the Ards. Erck gives the date of the church as 1738.

There is a small stone within the church marked—

E B . 1637

The following is built into the south wall of the church; it has a raised border, and is 3 ft. 3 in. long by 1 ft. 9 in. wide:—

"O SPECTATOR QVAM DOLENDE
CHRISTO SI DIFFERS INSERI:
EJVS MORS CŒLORVM PORTA
SANCTIS QVA DATVR INGREDI:
HINC GLORIAMVR DORMIENTES
IN SPE ANASTASEΩS

I M
E C
C ORD

1658."

TRANSLATION.

Mr. Garstin, F.S.A., writes:—

'The English equivalent seems to be:

"[Consider,] O spectator, how lamentable [it will be] if you put off being grafted into [or buried with?] Christ! His death is the gate of Heaven, by which it is granted to the saints to enter. Hence let us who lie sleeping here rejoice in the hope of the Resurrection. 1658."

'The first four lines are in metre, possibly intended to rhyme.

'The interchange of the Greek word for "Resurrection" is notable. The inscription seems not to refer to any family or individual, and might appropriately have been placed near the gate or entrance of a burial-ground.'

The remains of another stone is given, having the following imperfect inscription :—

I. I ELDER
1634
I. I T THE 2
1675
DEC 19

This is on a flat stone in the south side of the churchyard, nearly in line with the western end of the church.

Two other inscriptions from Comber are also given. The stones are fixed on the wall, and adjoin each other. The first has this inscription :—

The other this :—

1666
HEIR · LYETH	AND HIS WIFE MAR
JOHN · STINE	GRAT · STEVENS (?)
FEBR 25	SEP : 12 · 1686

On making recent inquiry respecting these stones, we were informed that the building in which they were, was taken down “about sixty years ago,” and a new church built in its place ; and the writer says he thinks no care was taken to preserve the memorials, and, so far as he knows, NO TRACE *remains of any of those about which we enquired !! Some years since a tombstone erected to the memory of a former incumbent of Comber, which was lying uncared for in the graveyard, was fixed in the front wall of the church tower ; he lived here (Comber) from 1683 to 1711, and was Chaplain to Lord Mount Alexander.

We are indebted to the Rev. George Smith, Rector of Comber, for the following copy of the inscription on the stone just referred to :—

* This affords another and a very striking example of the necessity for recording inscriptions ; and we believe it to be but one of many in every county in Ireland.—Ed.

"Near this Place Lyeth the body of y^e Reverend M^r EDMUND BENNET y^e late learned and Pious Minister of this Congregation and Chaplain to the Earle of Mount Alexander; he died the 15th of febr'y 17th very much Lemented." (sic)

Mr. Smith also informs us that he has a Register kept by the Rev. Edmund Bennet, above named; this Register goes back to the year 1683.

“Public Gratitude erected this stone to the memory of RICHARD COX ROWE, a celebrated comedian, born in Dublin in the year MDCCLIV., and died at Belfast, where he was universally admired on account of his merits as an actor, and his gentleness of manners as a man, on the seventh day of March, MDCCXCII.

 Thy bosom of cares and instruct thee the while ;
 If e’er thou wast charmed from dull anguish or woe,
 Pay a sigh—’tis a debt, o’er the relics of ROWE.”

“HERE LIETH THE BODY OF THOMAS
 WARD WHO DECEASED THE 16 DAY
 OF JULY 1688 AGED 68 YEARES.”

Esker Parish.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, V.P. R.S.A.I.]

‘This churchyard is situated one mile to the south-east of Lucan. Large portions of the north, south, and west walls are still standing; but except for one ogee-headed, double-lighted window in the south wall, no features of interest are left in them. Portion of a double-belfry tops the western gable, up which run two buttresses. The church is long, and very narrow for its length. What may have been the chancel is level with the ground.

'Lying in the west end of the church ruins is a large slab, which was smashed, about four years ago, by the fall of a portion of the belfry, into five or six different pieces; it was placed over the grave of the Rev. J. McCartan, who was killed by highway men in 1807, about a quarter of a mile along the Dublin road from Lucan; the spot is marked by a large slab built into the wall by the roadside (for the inscription on it, see under "Lucan"). On the slab over the grave is the following inscription':—

"Gloria in excelsis Deo.

Memento I H S Mori.

The United Parishes of Lucan and Palmerstown Erected this Tomb Stone over the Mortal Remains of the Revd. JAMES MCCARTAN R. C. Curate of said Parishes as a grateful tribute of their Respect for and as a lasting Monument of their sincere Regret of the loss of that Worthy Clergyman by whose death Society was deprived of a Valuable Member and Religion of her most Zealous Minister. Lamentable to add He fell a Victim to the sacrilegious hands of a sanguinary Banditti by whom he was robbed and murdered on the Hill of Lucan on the 3rd day of June A.D. 1807 and in the 42nd year of his Age.

Requiescat in pace. Amen."

(A chalice.)

[See Lucan Parish.]

"On another slab in the west end is inscribed':—

"Here lie the Remains of the Revd. JOHN KYAN who discharged the duty of a Faithfull Shepherd 35 years in Leixlip & the united Parishes after a long life of Piety and Virtue. Lucan Churchyard, Parish of Lucan.

[Kindly contributed by Lord Walter FitzGerald, V.P., R.S.A.I.]

'The ruins of the old church, burial-ground, and the castle of the Sarsfields, lie in the Lucan demesne in rear of the stables. The private burial-place of the Vesey family lies alongside the old castle; it contains a few modern headstones, and tablets, and a mural monument in the northern wall. This monument is of black and white marble, and consists of a child leaning over a medallion bearing a man's head in relief, with a plain pyramidical background, all supported on a couple of brackets, between which is a tablet bearing the following incised inscription':—

A.V. "This Chappel was repair'd by JANE LADY BUTLER, and this Monument erected to the Memory of her dearly Beloved Husband A.U. deceased the 23rd of March An: Domi: 1738, with whom she is interr'd Where thou Dyest there will I dye, and Where thou art buried, there will I be buried also."

'Of the abovenamed individuals, Burke, in his "Landed Gentry," says':—

"The Right Hon. Agmondisham Vesey, 2nd son of the Most Revd. John Vesey, Archbishop of Tuam, and brother of Sir Thomas Vesey, Bart., grandfather of the 1st Viscount De Vesci, married first Charlotte, daughter and sole heir of William Sarsfield, Esq., of Lucan, eldest brother of Patrick, Earl of Lucan, and by her had issue two daughters. He married secondly Jane, daughter of Captain Edward Pottinger (and relict 1st, of John Reynolds of Killabride, and 2ndly, of Sir Thomas Butler, Bart., of Cloghrennan), by whom he [had] issue four sons and four daughters."

'The neighbouring burial-ground is ill-kept, and since the new cemetery for Lucan was opened, this one has been closed; there appear to be no monuments of interest in it.

'About a quarter of a mile from the town of Lucan, along the Dublin road, built into the St. Edmundsbury demesne wall, is a large coffin-shaped slab marking the spot where years ago a Priest was robbed and murdered by highwaymen. At the head of the slab is an

and on either side of it a cherubim, below is the inscription in incised letters.'

We have given this inscription in vol. i., p. 175.—[ED].

'Father McCartan was buried in the neighbouring churchyard of Esker, inside the west end of the church ruins. Over his grave his parishioners erected a monument (for a description of which see Esker, Co. Dublin).

DERRYGONNELLY OLD CHURCH.

[From notes kindly contributed by the Earl Belmore, K.C.M.G.]

The stone represented in the annexed drawing is supposed to commemorate the date of the erection of this church, which was a Chapel of Ease of Inismacsaint parish. It is believed to have been erected by Sir John Dunbar, for the convenience of himself and his dependants, as the site of his dwelling-house was in an adjoining field. [See also vol. iii., p. 249, Dunbar Arms from Ballyshannon, Co. Donegal.]

We have to thank the Rev. Canon Geo. Tottenham for the photograph from which this plate has been made.

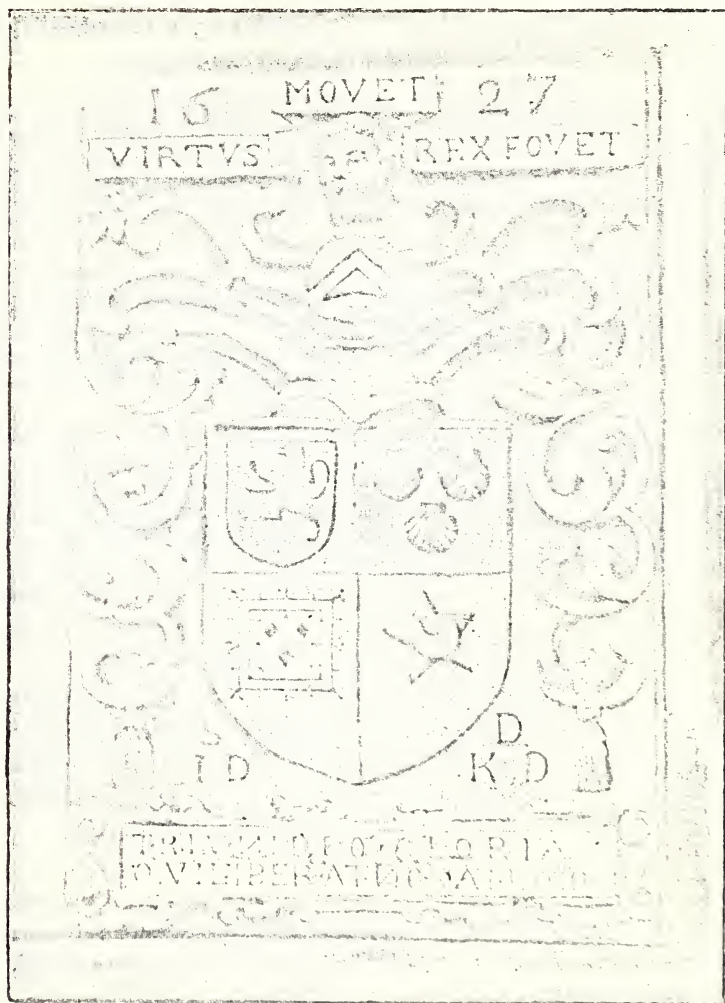

The motto underneath the shield reads:—

"TRIUNI DEO GLORIA QUI LIBERAT NOS A MALO."

With reference to the above coat-of-arms, Sir Arthur Vicars writes:—

'It is impossible for me to give the blazon of what is cut on the stone, it is so egregiously wrong. The following is what it should have been:—

'Quarterly 1st and 4th gu. a lion rampant within a bordure, arg. [for Dunbar], 2nd and 3rd or, three cushions within a double tressure flory counter flory gu. [for Randolph] impaling—or, a mullet gu. charged with a crescent arg. on a chief sable three escallops of the field.

‘In the funeral entry of Sir Richard Graham, the above arms are given in trick.’

‘Funeral Entries, vol. 17, p. 142’ :—

[From Office of Arms, Dublin.]

“SR. RICHARD GREAMES als. GRAHAM Knt. Died the 7th of Novembr. 1626. He married ELIZABETH Daur. of CHRISTOPR. HETHERINGTON of Dunecarney in the County of Dublin by whom he had issue THOMAS, WILLIAM, PETER, GEORGE, RICHARD, JANE, KATHERIN [DUNBAR], ELIZABETH, MARGARETT, and ANN.”

‘The two Coats on the dexter side in the drawing are meant to represent the Arms of Sir John Dunbar and those of Randolph, and what looks like two quarterings on the sinister side is really only one Coat, that of Graham. Lady Katherine Dunbar was a daughter of Sir Richard Greames or Graham, of Lynanstown, Queen’s County.’

‘The annexed inscriptions A and B are on stones in the body of the Church, towards the east end. That marked A is to RICHARD DUNBAR, Sir John’s grandson and successor (the latter’s eldest son JAMES having died s.p.), and of RICHARD’S son-in-law, HUGH MONTGOMERY.

‘B is to Mr. Montgomery’s great grandfather, HUGH MONTGOMERY, who died at Windsor in 1797. [For further particulars see the 3rd and 4th numbers of the Ulster Journal of Archaeology.]’

“VIRTVS MOVET REX FOVET.”

“HERE LIE THE BODIES OF RICHARD
DUNBAR AND HUGH MONTGOMERY
ESQ. RICH^d DIED JAN. 6TH 1666.
HUGH DIED SEPT. 26. 1722 AGED 71.”

(Death’s head and crossed bones at foot.)

‘B’ :—

“Here lieth the body of HUGH MONTGOMERY who departed this life July 20th 1797 aged 58 years.”

Lord Belmore thinks that this Hugh was great grandson of Richard Dunbar, whose only child Katherine [by Anna Catherine Lady Hamilton] married Hugh Montgomery. Their second son Hugh Willoughby married Elizabeth Armar, and their son Hugh married Katherine Montgomery, his cousin.

COUNTY GALWAY.

[From Mr. T. J. Westropp.]

Clare-Galway Friary.

'This Franciscan Friary stands on the bank of a little stream among prettily planted fields near the old square castle. It was founded by John de Cogan in 1290. The side walls of the chancel and the south walls of the nave belong to the original building. A graceful tower and arcade were subsequently added; the domestic buildings are of much later date.

'The monument here represented is set in an older tomb, whose graceful clustered pillars and Gothic canopy are in excellent preservation. There is no trace of an effigy among the fragments strewn about the ruins. The slab displays the De Burgo Arms and Crest, with rich mantling. Crest—A chained cat. Arms—A cross, a lion rampant in 1st quarter.'

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald, V.P. R.S.A.I.]

'All the following inscriptions are copied from tomb-slabs inside St. Nicholas's Church, and are all (except one) in raised letters; all that are visible there are given here, though it is possible a few more may be hidden under the matting on which some of the pews stand. This does not include the slabs with incised inscriptions, which I hope to copy at a future date.

'Down the centre runs an ornamental cross, and rich foliage.'

M. TEIG.

'In the above inscription the latter portion of the wife's surname is chipped away, but the "NI" at the beginning is a contraction of the Irish "ingen," meaning "daughter of," and is the feminine form of the O before an Irish surname. In the brother's name Teige Og—the Oge means "younger," the word that follows—"Cupers," is puzzling, and may be a nickname.'

'(In the south transept, continued)'

'A floor slab':—

'Several of the letters in the above inscription are conjoined.'

'Lying flat in the south aisle is a slab with an inscription in low relief running round the edge. The interior is taken up with three circles, in each of which is a Maltese shaped cross; between the two upper circles is an anchor. The inscription is as follows':—

"HIER : LEITH : THE : BOOI : OF : IHON :
 P (?) ORT : FIZ THEIG : NI : ELYN LINCH :
 HIS : WIFE : 1566."

'In a windowed recess at the junction of the south transept with the choir, is a smallish slab bearing an ornamental cross, the edges are bevelled, and on this portion is incised an inscription of a very early date, in French, as follows':—

“ D BVRE . . GIST DEVS DE SA ALME . . . MERCI.
 QVI POR SA ALME PRIERAVINT GORS DE PARDVN AVERA."

'Perhaps DAVID is the first word and CI the third, and AIT the missing one before Merci.'

"DAVID BURE lies here. May God have mercy on his Soul

COUNTY KILDARE.

Parish of Caragh—Caragh Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘This churchyard lies three miles to the south-west of Sallins; a modern chapel stands close to it, but of the old building the foundations alone are discernible. The graveyard contains no inscriptions of any interest, except the one given below, which faces the west’ :—

I. H. S.

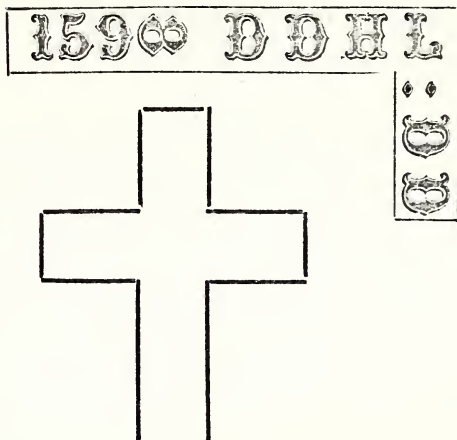

“Here Lyeth the Rev^d. Father CHRISTⁿ NUNY who serv^d this Parish Devoutly 41 years. Died Nov^r y^e 9th in y^e 78 year of his Age 1765.”

Parish of Churchtown*—Churchtown Churchyard.

‘This churchyard lies three miles to the north-west of Athy. Of the ruins of the church, all that is now left are large portions of the north and south walls; a doorway facing each other is in each, but all cut-stone work has been torn out, to be used as headstones to graves. In what was the chancel, is the half of a square head (with moulded corners) of a granite font. Near where it at present lies, is a slab, much sunk in the ground,

* ‘Though this church is now known by no other name than Churchtown, yet it very probably was called Fasagh Rheban Church, after the district it was situated in.’

measuring 6 feet 4 inches by 2 feet 2 inches; a large thorn tree over-shadows it; down the centre, lightly incised, runs a plain cross on three steps; at the head of the stone, along the rim, and partly down one side, runs a date and some letters, thus':—

'The lettering is in relief, and, as far as I know, has not been explained. It is probable that other interesting slabs are lying underneath the fallen masonry and accumulation of clay.'

'On another slab, which is raised above the level of the ground by means of a pile of loose stones, also in the chancel, is the following inscription, in raised letters':—

IN  RI
IHS

"Here lyeth y^e Body of BRYAN M^c MANUS late of Castle Rebban who departed this life y^e 9th of Dec^{br} 1729 aged 47 years & of his mother in law CATHRIN COFFIE who departed this life in y^e 73rd year of her age & also of his Daughter CATHRINE M^c MANUS who departed this life in 1729 and in y^e 20th year of her age.

Memento [Skull and cross-bones] mori."

'[Portion broken off.]'

'On a table tomb, near the above, is this inscription':—

"Here lyeth the Body of JAMES Moor who departed this life y^e 10th day of June 1758 Aged 37 y^{rs} Also SARAH WALSH who Departed her Life April 2nd 1771 Aged 24 y^{rs} "

"Here lyeth y^e Body of PATRICK M'EVOR Dep^d Iuly y^e 1st 1782 aged 60 y^{rs} y^e Lord have Mercy on his Soul Amen."

[A headstone.]

"Here lieth the Body of ROGER FLAHERTY who depa^{rt-} ed this life Augus^t the 6th 1765 Aged 21."

[A headstone.]

Cloncurry Churchyard—Parish of Cloncurry.

'The old Churchyard of Cloncurry lies a couple of miles to the east of Enfield Station on the Midland Great Western Railway. It is situated close to a good specimen of the Pagan burial moats, which stands to the west of it. Of the old church, the west gable end surmounted by a battlemented double belfry still stands, as well as portions of the N. and S. walls, while the chancel has been modernised and converted into a burial enclosure for the Aylmer and Luby families; a locked iron gate into it prevents the inscriptions on the tombs being read, except one to the Luby family, which is a mural tablet and has a shamrock in relief at the top, below which is the following inscription':—

"This Stone was Erected by THOMAS LUBY June y^e 1st 1739 in memory of WILL^m LUBY originally O'CONNOR who departed this Life Nov^{br} y^e ... 1703 whose Ancestors were buried in Ballinadrimna and MARY LUBY als STACK (?) his Wife & MARY LUBY als FOORD Wife of s^d THOMAS LUBY & WILLIAM his Son."

'On the exterior of the south wall of the chancel is a mural tablet, on which is incised':—

"Sacred to the Memory of JOHN LUBE ESQUIRE who died on the 29th of May 1862 at the early age of 27 years.
His remains are buried at Glasnevin He directed this tablet to be Erected at the Family Vault Cloncurry near the Home of his Ancestors, where his Uncle DENIS GEORGE LUBE, Esqr. late of Corkernstown, lies interred Who died on the 18th June 1852, and where a Mural Monument within the Chancel Commemorates the Grave of his Ancestor WILLIAM LUBIE of the ancient O'CONNOR Faley Sept a distinguished Officer of King James' Army Who died A.D. 1703."

'Inside the west end of the church ruins lie the two following slabs thus inscribed':—

"Beneath this Stone lies the Body of M^r PHILIP REED late of Dysart who departed this life y^e 2nd of Nov^r 1774 Aged 57 years Also his Daughter HESTHER Departed this Life y^e 22nd of Nov^r 1773 Aged 17 y^{rs} Also his Daughter BRIDGET McLAUGHRY als REED Depart^d this Life

y^e 13 Iune 1782 Aged 29 yr^s "

"JOHN DONNELLAN died Apl^l y^e 20th 1741 Aged 36.
HANNAH DONNELLAN died May y^e 10th 1736 Aged 2 years.
TERESA DONNELLAN died March y^e 16th 1737 Aged one year & a half. NEHEMIAH DONNELLAN died August y^e 13th 1739 aged one year. ELIZABETH DONNELLAN died JULY y^e 16th 1741 Aged two years."

'Above this inscription, carved in relief, is an ornamental shield with two coats-of-arms impaled, and a helmet and crest, as given below':—

'For DONNELLAN.—"Argent, a tree eradicated vert, fructed or.'"

'The sinister impalement is:—"A fess between three crosslets fitché (or three crosses potent fitché). If the former it may possibly be intended for the arms of the Gore family.'"

'The above information on the coats was obtained from Sir Arthur Vickers (Ulster), as Burke's "General Armory" did not give a Donnellan coat corresponding with those on the stone.'

'The next two inscriptions are taken from headstones on the south side of the churchyard; the Hughes one is very roughly done':—

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF JAMES HUGHES
2 WIVES WHO DEPARTED THEIR LIFE WAN IN Y^EEAR OF 1723 OTHER IN 1739 ALLSO HIS POSTARTYS" (sic).

"THIS STONE WAS ERECTED BY JAMES

& HIS WIFE ANNORY DOULING ALIS
MAGAUEN DEPARTED THIS LIFE APRIL Y^E 21st
1728 AGE^P 66 YEARS & ALSO DAVID MAGAUEN
HIS UNKEL DEPARTED APRIL Y^E 9th 1731 AGED 74 YEARS."

Parish of Kilcock, Kilcock Churchyard.

'This churchyard is situated in the town of Kilcock; all traces of the church ruins are gone, except a portion of the foundations of the walls.

The following inscription, copied from a headstone, appears to be the oldest in the churchyard':—

“HERE LYETH THE BODY OF GARRET
BRYNE WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 11TH OF AUGUST ANN DOM° 1704.”

Naas Parish—St. David's Church.

‘The following are mural monuments on the north wall.

‘The first as you enter the church is':—

“TO THE MEMORY OF CHARLES STANNARD

[White marble.]

‘The next monument is also of white marble :—

‘The Crest—A stag's head (?)

‘Arms—1st or, (?) a saltier (gu ?), 2nd a lion rampant (?)’

“Sacred to the Memory of | Lieut. General CHARLES EUSTACE

'The next is a small tablet of white marble':—

"In the memory of CHRISTOPHER KNIGHT LEE ESQUIRE |

met his death by drowning on the | 26th day of March
1835. | aged 25 years.
This officer by his many and singularly amiable qualities endeared himself not only to his brother officers | but to every individual in the corps to which he belonged, | and the manifest but subdued grief testified at his | funeral were eloquent tokens of the esteem in which | he was held. |
This Tablet was erected | by his affectionate sister."
[M. & P. Harris.]

'Underneath the last is a brass, with the following, in old English :—

"In Loving Memory of WILLIAM DE BURGH, D.D., sometime Rector of Ardboe in the County of Tyrone |
whose life of earnest piety, marked also by deep learning | employed in the study and interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures | gave an example of true devotion to his Master's cause. |
He fell asleep in Christ Octr. 15 in the year | of his age
66, of our Salvation 1866."

'The next is a memorial window of stained glass, King David and King Solomon, and underneath, this inscription':—

1872 . ERECTED BY SOME OF HIS FRIENDS
AS A TRIBUTE OF AFFECTION & ESTEEM."

'It will be remembered that Lord Mayo was murdered by a native prisoner of Upper India at the Andaman Islands.'

‘On a small white marble slab’ :—

“IN MEMORY OF | THOMAS BURGH ESQ^R

SURVIVING CHILDREN | IN AFFECTIONATE
REMEMBRANCE | OF | THE VERY REVEREND
THOMAS JOHN, DEAN OF CLOYNE WHO
DIED THE 5TH OF SEPTEMBER 1845, |
AGED 59 YEARS | AND OF THE RIGHT
HONOURABLE | THE LADY ANNE LOUISA
DE BURGH | HIS WIFE | WHO DIED THE 20TH OF DECEMBER 1857, AGED 71 YEARS.”*

[1 Thess. ch. iv. 13.]

‘On the right of the chancel is a monument’ :—

“Erected | by the Hon. RICHARD HELY HUTCHINSON in

SOPHIA WOLFE | Widow of the late Rev. RICHARD WOLFE of Forenaghts | who entered into her rest | January 19th
1870, aged 71 years.”

[Job xxix. 11, Ps. cxxvii. 2.]

‘Next this, on the south wall, is a small tablet of white marble’ :—

“Sacred | to the memory of | HELENA | wife of | ADAM BEVERHOUDT Lieut. of H. M. 58th Regt. Daughter of THOMAS JACKSON of Faunningstown | in the County of Limerick Esquire who | died the 13th day of February in the | year of our Lord 1829, aged 22 years | and whose remains are interred in the adjoining churchyard.”

* For particulars of Dean Burgh's & de Burgh's birth, marriage, and children, &c., and clerical history, see “Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross,” by the late Rev. M. Brady, 1863, vol. ii., p. 205.—[Ed.]

‘On top, arms and supporters. Figures of Angels weeping, &c.’

“This monument was erected by JOHN the fourth Earl of MAYO | in memory of his Grandfather | JOHN the first EARL of MAYO | and his Father JOSEPH DEAN | Lord Archbishop of TUAM, and Earl of Mayo who died | the 17th of August 1794 | aged 63 years.”

‘A white marble monument, having on top a helmet and military trophies’ :—

HONBLE SIR EDWARD LOVETT PEARCE | He entered the Service in 1788 and distinguished himself | received the public thanks of the Government twice | and of the Commanders in Chief, on the Field. He died 3rd May 1824 at Caunpore in Command | and in humble and devout gratitude to Almighty God for the manifold blessings enjoyd by him thro’ life | Bequeathed to the benefit of the poor of the Parish Church of Naas £20 per Annum for ever, to the ministers | and Church-wardens Trustees. ABI ET FACTU SIMILITER.”

‘Beneath is the family crest, a lion rampant.

‘Arms ——. Motto—Ad mortem fidelis.’

‘The above completes the mural monuments within the church; for those on the floor see Vol. i., p. 192.

‘The east window is of stained glass to the memory of a former Rector, the Rev. Maurice T. De Burgh, who died in 1894, Archdeacon of Kildare.

‘The Lectern is of brass, very handsome, with an inscription near its base.

‘The Pulpit is of Bath stone, carved and handsome.

‘It appears to be a great pity the present wholesale introduction into this country by architects and others concerned in church restoration, &c., of Bath and Caen stone, when our own country is so abundant in stone and marble of a far more lasting nature, to say nothing of their superior appearance. We think a change might well be made in this matter, and money now spent with our neighbours across the channel, expended amongst our needy countrymen.

'THE BELLS.

'The following inscription is on the only bell in the tower':—

"OS : MEVM : LAVDABIT : DOMINVM : IN :
 ECCĪLA : SCĪI : DAVIDIS : DE : NAAS :
 RP  WC   1674 S ∞ S S ∞ S
 S ∞ S S ∞ S."

"My mouth shall praise the Lord in the Church of Saint David of Naas."

'The letters RP and WC are probably those of the bell-founders, or else of the churchwardens. The figures in the last line of the above inscription are meant to represent bells. The inscription runs round the bell.

'The diameter of this bell is 3 feet 3 inches.'

'Do the letters S ∞ S at the end of the above inscription stand for Sanctus-Sanctus, &c. ?'

With reference to this bell, and the initials, &c., on it, Richard Langrishe, Esq., writes:—R. P. stands for Robert Perdue, and W. C., William Covey, the two principal makers of the company of bell-founders who came to Ireland from Salisbury in 1671, to erect the bells of St. Patrick's and Christ Church Cathedrals in Dublin. They cast six for Limerick and six for Kilkenny, all from the small "Sweeps." The Limerick and St. Patrick's tenor bells still exist.

William Perdue, the elder brother, died at Limerick, and his tomb and epitaph are mentioned in Dineley's "Tour"—fortunately—as the tombstone is gone:—

"Here a bellfounder, honest and true, Till the resurrection—lies PERDUE."

Mr. Langrishe says "their marks were bells and scrolls, not S's," as we surmised.

COUNTY KILKENNY.

St. Patrick's Parish, Kilfera—Church of St. Fiacre.

I. H. S.

“Gloria in Excelsis Deo.

Erected by MATT. POWER in memory of his father EDWARD POWER who dep^d this life Sept. 27th (?) 1813 aged 70^o years. Also his mother MARGARET POWER who dep^d this life Octr. 2nd 1817, aged 70 years. Also his son EDW^p POWER departed this life Janry 4th (?) 1818 aged 9 years & 7 months.

Lord have mercy on their souls. Amen.”

“Here lieth the body of KENNY PURCELL Esqr. who departed this life 30th May 1809 In the 81st year of his Age. He was Clerk of the Peace for the County of Kilkenny For nearly 20 years. May he rest in peace Amen. Also the body of FRANCES AUGUSTA widow of WILLIAM HENRY HUNT J.P. Jerpoint House and Relict of KENNY PURCELL Esqr. she died 26th July 1882 aged 82 years.”

‘This altar-tomb is erected within the space formerly occupied by a very small oratory, the ancient walls of which, I believe, were taken down, and the present dwarf walls built on the same lines. When making the grave for Mr. Purcell, an old stone coffin was discovered, supposed to have held the body of St. Fiacre; the head and arms were missing, but the rest of the body was in it. This coffin now stands propped up against another stone.

I. H. S.

D. O. M.

“God be merciful to the Soul of JOHN POWER who died in the y^r 1758 aged 69. Also his Wife MARG^t POWER al^s BERGIN who died in the y^r 1741, Aged 50, with THO^s MARG^t JN^o JOAN & JN^o grandchildren of PATT POWER.”

‘There are no more tombstones with inscriptions.’

Kilmacow Parish, Diocese of Ossory.

‘The old parish church and burial-ground are about a mile from Kilmacow station, in the village of that name. The church was dedicated to St. Mochua, hence the name Kilmacow. The ancient church has disappeared, having been replaced by a modern one, built in 1818.

‘Mr. Manning mentions a very ancient tombstone, of which he writes:—

“This tombstone is easily found, being now set up on end against the east wall of the graveyard—a conspicuous object. The lettering appears to commence with the words ‘This done’ [Qy. this stone?—P. D.V.] in English, and to bear the name ‘BUTLER’ further on, and to end with the date MCCCCC, and, being in good preservation, might be easily read by a person of any experience who had half an hour to spare. The rubbing is not nearly so distinct as the stone. It was taken by Mr. John Hewetson, and sent by the Rev. T. W. Manning, Incumbent of the Parish, to Canon E. F. Hewson, Gowran, 28th August, 1896.”

[From the Rev. T. White Manning, Kilmacow Rectory.]

“In the family vault of the GREENES of Greenville in this church lie interred the remains of ROBERT ROCHFORD, late of Clogrenane, in the County of Carlow, Esqr. He died at Bishopp Hall the 14th of Feb. 1757, in the 31st year of his age.”

‘On the floor of the vestry there is a flat slab, with the following inscription’ :—

“Here lyeth y^e body of y^e REV^d JOHN DRAY who Departed this Life y^e 3^d of August 1740 in y^e 33^d Year of his age.
Also y^e Body of ANN DRAY his daughter who Departed this Life y^e 24th of July 1740 in y^e 5th Year of her age.”

Parish of Ballycallan.

‘St. Bridget, or Brigid, of Kildare is the patroness of the Parish of Ballycallan. Her festival is observed on the 1st of February. On the eve of the festival children and men may be observed wending their way to the churchyard. The surface of the graves is dug up; sand is placed upon them; they are raised, made smooth and neatly rounded; they are then decked with holly and ivy and other evergreens, together with such flowers as can be procured.

‘In this churchyard are interred the remains of a benevolent gentleman, JOSEPH EVANS, Esq., of Belevan, near Ballycallan. Annexed is a copy of the inscription on his tomb’ :—

“Sacred to the memory of JOSEPH EVANS Esqr. of Belevan who died on the 7th day of August 1818, aged 72 years. He founded and endowed, in the City of Kilkenny, an asylum for Decayed Servants and Orphan Children, and left an ample bequest in aid of the other established Charitable Institutions.”

‘On another tomb is the following inscription’ :—

“Here lieth the body of JOSEPH EVANS, of Belevan in the County of Kilkenny, Esqr., who departed this life the 26th of February, 1788, in the 89th year of his age.”

St. Michael's Church.

‘The Church of St. Michael was situated between the hamlet of Goldenfield and the monument bush at Damagh. The churchyard is still used as a cemetery. It appears from an inscription on a very plain headstone that this church was built by WILLIAM SMYTH, Esq., who died in 1655. He was the eldest son of SMYTH, of Long Ashton, near Bristol, in England.

‘According to a local legend, the design of the founder was to erect his church near the ancient mansion place of the SMYTH family, the site of which is now occupied by the hospitable residence of P. Kelly, Esq., Damagh.’

‘According to an inscription on another stone, the church was re-built by JOHN SMYTH, who died in 1708, and is buried within the church. How the church should require to be re-built within so short a period, I am at a loss to explain. The outlines and some portions of the walls of the church remain. It was of an oblong form, being fifty English feet long and nineteen feet wide. The walls were only twenty-three inches thick. A portion of the western gable is about thirteen feet high. There was a door at the south side, and the altar stood at the east end. The northern side wall was supported by three buttresses. About sixty years ago the roof fell off this church.’

‘Though there is no prayer on the monuments for the repose of the soul of the founder, yet the fact of a pattern being held there, and the tradition of the neighbourhood that no Protestant was ever interred in this graveyard, show that the church was erected for Catholic worship. Two of the headstones belonging to the SMYTH family were formerly mural entablatures. The recesses in the walls from which they fell are still visible.

‘These memorial slabs have been appropriated by other families, and bear the following inscriptions’ :—

D. O. M.

“HERE LYETH THE BOOIE OF WILLIAM SMYTH, OF DAMAGE, ESQ. SOME TYME SECRETARIE TO JAMES,
EARLE OF ORMONDE AND OSSORIE.
LONG AFTER ALL WAS MADE, I MADE, WAS MARR'D

 OR PRAYED FOR ME, OR SHOWED TO ME ANY DEED OF PITTYE.

 ANNO SALUTIS 1655."

'Another inscription':—

"WILLIAM SMYTH, ESQ., ELDEST SON OF SMYTH, ESQ., OF LONG ASHTON NEAR BRISTOL, BUILT THIS CHURCH AND DYED ON THE 24TH OAY OF APRIL,
 1655, AGED 65 YEARS.

MARY SMYTH, ALIAS KINSMAN, WIFE TO SAID
 WILLIAM, DYED ON THE 16TH DAY OF MAY 1658.

LAURENCE SMYTH, SON TO SAID WILLIAM, WAS KILLED AT THE SIEGE OF DROGHEDA ON THE 11TH
 DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1649, AGED 28 YEARS.

ANNA MARIA SMYTH, ALIAS PREBITZER, WIFE TO SAID LAURENCE, DYED AT BILBAO ON THE 23RD
 DAY OF JANUARY, 1676.

VALENTINE SMYTH, son to said LAURENCE, dyed at Bath on the 15th day of March, 1700, aged 59 years. MARY SMYTH, alias BRYAN, wife to said VALENTINE, dyed on the 21st day of March, 1706. JOHN SMYTH, son to said VALENTINE, dyed on the 8th day of June, 1708, aged 41 years. JANE SMYTH, alias READ, wife to said JOHN, died on the 28th day of August, 1747, aged 71 years."

'The above will appear more clearly from the following arrangement:—

'WM. SMYTH, who built the church, died 1655, a. 65 years; m. MARY KINSMAN, d. 1658.

'LAURENCE SMYTH, killed at the siege of Drogheda 11, 9, 1649, a. 28,
 m. ANNA MARIA PREBITZER, died 1676.

'VALENTINE SMYTH died in Bath in 1700, a. 59, and was there interred in St. Michael's Church ; m. MARY BRYAN, d. 1706.

'JOHN SMYTH, who rebuilt this church, d. 8, 6, 1708, aged 41 ; m. JANE REALL, died 28, 7, 1747, a. 71 years.

'The SMYTHS were brought from England by the ORMONDS, from whom they obtained considerable grants of lands, not only in Damagh, but also at Ballyline, Westcourt, Callan, &c. Their descendants are still, or were until lately, proprietors in that district.'

The above are taken from "Notes on the Antiquities of the United Parishes of Ballycallan, Kilmanagh, and Killaloe," by the Rev. J. Holahan, C.C., 1875.

Muckalee Old Churchyard, Barony of Fassardinan.

KING'S COUNTY.

Durrow Parish.

[From Lord Walter Fitzgerald, F.R.S.A.]

'Durrow Churchyard lies in Mr. Hector R. Toler's demesne of Durrow Abbey, about four miles from Tullamore. A small disused Protestant Church in it contains a few modern mural tablets, and one interesting pavement slab. The latter lies just inside the western entrance; it bears a short inscription in large raised letters, below which is an unfinished coat-of-arms; the sinister half is not commenced, and the dexter half contains two stags perpendicular, one above the other, the upper one is given a long tail like a cow. The inscription is as follows':—

"HEARE LYETH THE BODY OF FRANCIS
DERENCI WHO DYED IN TINICR^{OS} IN
THE YEARE OF OVR LORD GOD 1665.

'There was a family of De Rinzy, who was granted the manor of Clobemon, Co. Wexford, by Charles I., and whose arms were, a springing buck; it is possible the above Francis was a member of that family.'

We can make nothing of the "knot" and other objects at the foot of the stone. We shall be glad if some of our friends can.

The hind legs of the upper stag are very indistinct, from the effect of people walking constantly on them in passing in and out of the church.

Nothing certain is known of this De Renci; he may have been, and probably was, a son or near relative of Sir Mathew De Renzi, of Athlone, who died in 1634. [See "Memorials of the Dead," vol. ii., p. 228.—ED.]

In "Ulster's" office, in Dublin, there is a funeral entry showing the Arms of Sir Mathew De Renzi, of Dublin, Knt. (who married Anne, daughter of Richard Maypowder, of Killinaboy), who died 29th August, 1634.

There is some slight similarity between these Arms and those on the Durrow stone.

The De Renzi Arms on the former are: Sa, a stag rampant, or.

Carlingford.

[From the “Handbook” published by Greer, Curry, Lamont, &c., in 1846.]

‘Contiguous to the old abbey is a spacious and handsome modern church erected upon the site of an ancient religious edifice, the tower of which, being in good preservation, serves as a steeple to the present building.

‘It is surrounded by a remarkably green graveyard, well stocked with old oaks and spreading sycamores, in which there is a curious carved stone, and several monuments of the families of Moore and Millar.

‘Formerly, a large bell of ancient Irish workmanship, with a peculiarly mellow and sonorous tone, and which it is said belonged to the old abbey, was in this church; but a former rector sold it for a very large sum of money to the people of Liverpool, in a church in which town it is still tolled.

‘The monastery was founded in 1308 by Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, under the invocation of St. Malachi; and when the above-named book was being written, this ancient monastery was “desecrated to the purposes of a ball-alley, or tennis-court.”’

This is another of the many cases in which the sacred ruins of churches are converted into places of recreation, and not only of recreation, but too frequently of uproar, quarrelling, intoxication, and profane language, which neither the Protestant Rector nor the Roman Catholic priest prevent.

Like Cavan, Kerry, Leitrim, Longford, Monaghan, and Sligo, nothing has been received by us from this county. COUNTY MEATH.

Clongill Old Churchyard, near Kells [Donaghpatrick].

[From the late G. V. Du Noyer's Notes.]

‘THE TRYNCH TOMB.’

‘In the month of August, 1865, I lighted on this quaint and interesting tomb-slab, and on announcing the discovery to the Rev. Dr. Brady, he kindly informed me that it was commemorative of the death of the ancestor of the Clancarty family.

‘The shield bears in chief, a lion passant, and the sun in splendour over it. The lower portion of the shield is parted per pale, the dexter side being semè with Tudor roses, and the sinister filled with the emblems of St. Joseph's trade,—the saw, the chisel, the hammer, bit and brace, and square. The legend is as follows’ :—

“HIC · IACET · IOCOBVS · (sic) TRY I NCHE ·
CLERICUS · RECTOR · QV I ONDAM · HVIVS ·
ECCLESIAE · DE · CLON I GELL · EX · ILLVSTRI ·
ET · INVICITO · SCOTINO · GENTE · NATVS ·
CVM · SEX · LIBERIS · QVI · HANC I VITAM ·
PEREGIT · DECIMO · TERTIO · DIE · MENSIS ·
MARTII · ANNO · DOMINI · 1631.”

Under the shield is written:—

“MARGRETA · MONTGOMRI | VXSOR ·
DEFVNCTI · ET · MA | TER · PREDICTORUM ·
SEX | LIBERORVM · HOC · FECIT · |
CONDERE.”

Below this again is a shield without arms, and next it a death's head and crossed bones.

The above Thomas Trynch (Du Noyer says), was the ancestor of the Clancarty family.

ANTIQUITIES AT TREVEY.

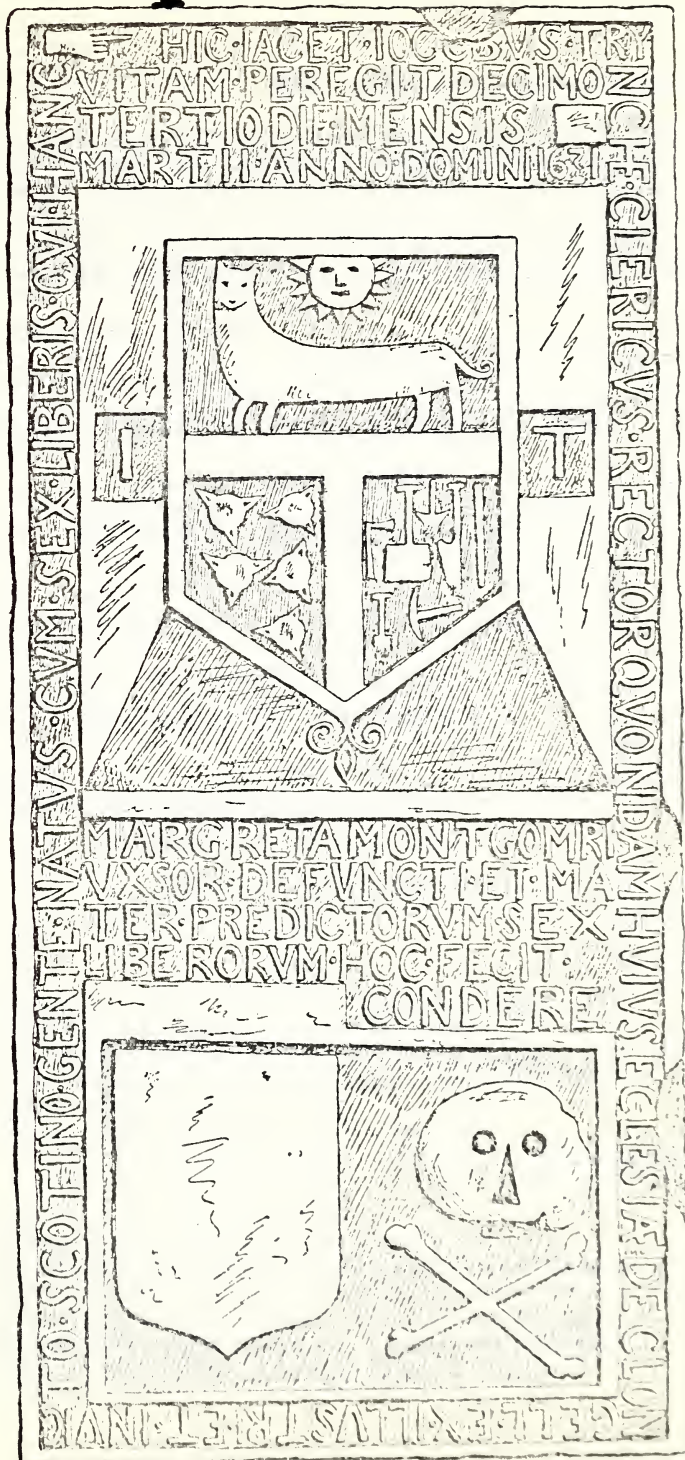

[From the Rev. Henry W. Davidson.]

‘The church stands on a high knoll beside the road. On the north side of the churchyard there is a rath. The north and south walls of the church are still standing, in some places to the height of 10 feet; the latter has three windows in it. Of the west wall all that remains is a heap of rubbish with elder trees growing upon it.

‘On entering at north door one finds a tombstone inscribed, “Patrick Sherlock 1785”; another “John Ball 1716”; and another in memory of “M. ROBERT IEALLOVS 1725” [FEALLOVS ?]

‘Further on, on south side of nave, is a large square tomb, on the covering slab of which is a crest with mantling and a coat-of-arms, but no inscription legible. The crest seems to be a leopard passant upon a helmet facing to dexter.

‘At the east end there is a fine carved slab, probably the side of a raised altar-tomb. On it is represented a family group consisting of a gentleman and his wife, dressed after the fashion of the time of Queen Elizabeth or James I., kneeling on each side of a table upon which rests an open book.

THE TRYNCHE TOMB, OLD CHURCHYARD, CLONGILL, CO. MEATH.

Behind the knight are kneeling his five sons with joined hands ; behind them again is a large figure (indistinct). Behind the dame her seven daughters kneel. Over their heads are four arches with corbels ; grotesque faces are carved in spaces between the crowns of the arches. Below this slab lies another, on which are carved a number of shields, the bearings well preserved, but the inscription, if any, is covered by the upper slab.'

Tipperary Parish.

[Kindly contributed by R. Southcote Mansergh, Esq., 1897.]

"Here lyes the body of JAMES SOUTHCOTE son of NICHOLAS SOUTHCOTE of Greenane who was born the 20th day of March 1685 and dyed the 2nd day of January 1703.
Here lyes the body of MANSERGH SOUTHCOTE who was born the 2nd day of October 1700 and dyed the 28th day of March 1710."

The above inscription is on a slab covering the entrance to the Greenane vault in the churchyard.

The letters are raised, and are as sharp and clean as if cut only last year.

The Rev. Denis Hanan, D.D., informs us that this vault was built by the Southcotes of Greenane, and that the late Mr. Mansergh built a spiral monument over the vault.

The Rev. Doctor Hanan, Rector of Tipperary, sends us the following additional information, for which we beg to thank him :—

'There is an altar-tomb where the MOORES of Mooresfort buried. The inscription is defaced, and the tomb seems to have been changed to a north and south position when the walk through the churchyard was made. (Family extinct.)

'There is also an old grave where the KING family of Kingswell buried. An ash tree has split the stones in pieces. (Family extinct.)

‘There is a plain headstone inscribed’ :—

“Here Lyeth y^e Bod^y of CHRISTOPHER EMETT who Departed this life y^e 26th of August anno Dm. 1743 in y^e 41st year of his Age.”

‘Supposed to be an uncle of Robert Emmett.’

‘The churchyard is in a very untidy condition, and we cannot regulate the burials. Part of it is seriously overcrowded, but the Board of Guardians will not do anything.’

Tubbrid and Ardfinnan Parishes [union].

[From the Rev. C. T. M'Cready, D.D., Dublin.]

‘These benefices are in the Diocese of Lismore; they lie between the Galtee and the Knockmealdown Mountains. The parishes above named were united in 1873.

TUBBRID.

‘This benefice consists of the parishes of Whitechurch, Tubbrid, and Ballybacon.

‘The present (modern) church is dedicated to St. John; it is a fairly handsome building, both inside and out; it contains a fireplace, with a striking chimneypiece bearing, with a coat-of-arms, the following inscription’ :—

“1729. JOHANNES HOADLY hanc Domum re fecit.

‘This inscription might lead one to suppose that the church had been erected by Archbishop Hoadly, were we not informed by the parochial records that the chimneypiece had been brought to Tubbrid Church from a former archiepiscopal residence at Tallaght, Co. Dublin.

‘The church contains mural slabs in memory of the Rev. HENRY PALMER, for 54 years Vicar of Tubbrid, who died 26th March, 1871, in his 90th year; and in memory of his first wife MARIA (daughter of the Rt. Rev. JOSEPH STOCK, Bishop of Waterford), who died 31st January, 1826 [aged 40]; and of his second wife MARY (daughter of a Mr. QUAYLE), who died 21st December, 1843, in the 50th year of her age.

‘There is also a mural slab erected by the Rev. HENRY PALMER, junr. (son of the above-mentioned HENRY PALMER by his first wife MARIA STOCK), in memory of his first wife ANNIE, who died 9th March, 1873 [aged 49].

‘The Rev. HENRY PALMER married secondly ESTHER PARKER.

THE GRAVEYARDS.

‘On the south side of the church is a very small burial-ground, in which are tombstones recording the interment of the following :—

'The Rev. HENRY PALMER, senior, and his two wives.

'The first wife of the Rev. HENRY PALMER, junior.

'The Rev. LESLIE BATTERSBY, D.D., Rector of Ardfinnan, who died 9th July, 1819.

The small graveyard reserved for the use of the parishioners attending the present parish church, is separated from the adjoining much larger burial-ground by a wall, which is said to have been originally the south wall of a former church, that was destroyed by fire, the present south wall of the church having been originally the north wall of the earlier church.

The outer graveyard, which is crowded, and largely used by Roman Catholics, contains the four walls of a ruined ancient church, of moderate size, the eastern and western walls of which are kept standing by an iron rod stretched between them.

'Into the outer face of the western wall of this ancient church is inserted a slab, bearing, in raised letters and in contracted Latin, an inscription to the effect that GEOFFREY KEATING was buried there':—

I H S ✠ A N R

"ORATE PRO AIĀBS P. EUGENIJ : DUHY
VIC. DE TVBRUD ET D. DOCT. GALF :
KEATING HUIS SACELLI FUNDATORŪ:
NEC NŌ ET PRO AIĒS ALIJSTĀ SACERD.
QUAM LAICIS QUORŪ CORPA IN EOD
JACET SA. Aº DOÑI . 1644."

'In the graveless churchyard used as an approach to the present modern church, stood formerly a blacksmith's forge, which was very properly removed by the Rev. Henry Palmer, senr.

"A little to the N.E. of St. John's Church, stands a building which is said to have been a school, once held under Erasmus Smith's Board, but which is now a cottier's residence. A stone in the front of the building bears the date "A.D. 1821." A little to the west of the church stands the parochial school-house, a small building in poor repair.

THE GLEE AND GLEBE HOUSE.

‘On the hill called “Vicar’s Hill,” to the east of the church, stands the glebe-house, in a position commanding a very charming and extensive view of the surrounding country and mountains. It is said that seven counties can be seen from the tower in the garden.

'At the date of Disestablishment, the glebe contained 44 acres, 2 roods, and 20 perches, statute measure, but of this, 28 acres, 3 roods, and 24 perches were sold in 1879 to the Rev. Henry Palmer.

WHITECHURCH.

"This parish lies north of Tubbrid, and extends to the ridge of the "Galtees"; it contains the ruins of Whitechurch Abbey.

BALLYBACON.

'This parish is to the south of Tubbrid, and runs up to the very summit of the Knockmealdown Mountains (2,609 feet).

'There is a ruined castle at Gortnacullin, and another near Newcastle. There are also within the parish the ruins of Lady's Abbey, Ballybacon Church, and a church in the townland of Gormanstown.'

(To be continued.)

COUNTY TYRONE.

Parish of Caledon.

[From the Rev. Canon Armstrong.]

'I send on the opposite leaf a copy of the Hamilton stone, which was in this churchyard, but now is in the porch. It took me three days to decipher, and there are three blanks—the first, I think, must have been "Captain," but the letters are gone. The month of James's death is beyond me, also his age. The scroll-work round the arms is so indistinct that it is beyond drawing, but scroll work it was':—

“HEIRE LYETH THE BODY OF
 WILLIAM HAMILTON
 WHO DIED IN MARCH 1674 AND MARGERY HAMILTON HIS WIFE WHO DYED IN IVLY 1674
 ALSO THE BODY OF CAPTⁿ
 IAMES HAMILTON AT LOUGH
 NAB SON TO THE ABOVE

'This William Hamilton is said to have been at the battle of Benburb.

'Between the initials at the head of this stone and the inscription, is a shield with the Hamilton arms and mantling.'

Parish of Clonfeacle.

BENBURB.

[From Mr. C. J. Hobson, Carlow.]

'I enclose additional inscriptions from Benburb Churchyard. These monuments have been brought to light mainly through the efforts of Dr.

Browne, who got up a fund for the clearing of the churchyard from briars and weeds.

“ Hic Ia-et Reu IOH-KENNEDY F.U.D. Min
 Hac Parochar Per annos 50 [?] qui I-uasit
 22 iune 1761 Ætatis sue 77 mo [annos ?]
 Hic quoque Iacet THO— KENNEDY Filus
 Primo guenitus R.I.K. qui Den— 23tio Jul—1746 nat—
 —ts Anno.”

On top, over this inscription, are the crest, arms, and motto of KENNEDY ; and at foot, a crescent with a man's face (in profile) within it.

‘ About twenty yards from the south-eastern corner of the parish church, and near to that of the Rev. Alexander Moore, is the tombstone of the Rev. John Kennedy, having the Kennedy coat-of-arms.

‘ The inscription is in Latin, this being the only Latin inscription in this churchyard.

‘ The Rev. John Kennedy was 47 years minister of the Presbyterian Church adjacent to the village, having been ordained to the ministry on the 13th of July, 1714, so that his entire ministry was spent in this place.

‘ The inscription is now very hard to decipher, and some words and letters have disappeared.

‘ The above Rev. JOHN KENNEDY was son of Rev. THOMAS KENNEDY, of Carland, and nephew of GILBERT KENNEDY, of Dundonald. The Rev. THOMAS KENNEDY was ordained in 1696 [?], and died 1761. He was son of Col. GILBERT KENNEDY, of Ardmillan, in Ayrshire, and nephew of JOHN 6TH EARL OF CASSILLIS.’

“ HERE LYETH THE BODY OF THE REV MR

‘ The Rev. Alexander Moor was minister of the Presbyterian congregation of Minterburn, distant about six miles from Benburb. His ordination took place on the 8th day of October, 1716. Until a few months ago, this tombstone was buried beneath the rubbish that had been allowed to accumulate.'

* ‘ MINTERBURN.’

BODY

"HERE LIETH THE | OF NED HELL |
WHO DIED DECE | MBER 21 1761 | AGED 22 YEARS."

'The above inscription, copied from a small headstone about the centre of this churchyard, is rather unique, owing to the name of the deceased. Taking into consideration the way in which the two letters L are intentionally run into each other in his surname, I have no doubt that HILL was the name of the deceased. The word "body" was evidently omitted by the sculptor in the first line, and afterwards put above the word. No persons of this name are now known to live in the neighbourhood.'

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF | MR WILLIAM

'The above inscription is copied from a tombstone alongside that of Rev. Alex. Moor; both are of freestone. The inscriptions are well nigh unreadable.'

"THIS IS IOHN ANDERSON BURYING PLEA^S."

'This quaint inscription is copied from a small upright stone near the southern boundary of this cemetery. Representatives of this family still reside in the locality.'

Killea.

'Tombstone in the old burial-ground of Killea, near Dunmore East.

'The north wall of the square tower, about 40 ft. in height, is still standing. Part of the east gable, and about 8 ft. in height of the south wall, and the foundations and bits of the other walls, are much concealed by fallen rubbish. The style of building is very old. There are no dressed stones. In the tower there are the remains of two small windows and part of a vaulted chamber at its base.

'The burial-ground has lately been well enclosed with a good wall on three sides and a bank on the other. I failed to discover any older inscriptions than 1714. Like so many other Irish burial-grounds, this is one wild mass of overgrown nettles and other weeds ; utterly neglected, I may say. What is to be said of the reverence shown by the descendants of those buried here, for their ancestors, when they allow such a state of things to exist ?'

Killea Old Church, near Dunmore.

[From Notes taken in 1891 by Colonel Vigors.]

'A large upright stone stands against the north wall of the tower of the old church, inscribed thus':—

'Several other members of the WYSE family are also named on this stone.'

"HENRY DUMPHY in memory of his wife ALICE DUMPHY or MORRIS who departed this life Augt. 7th 1827 aged 64 years."

'An upright stone stands at the head of the last':—

"Erected to the memory of EDWARD MORRIS who died July 24, 1776, aged 75 years, also four of his children."

'A flat stone, half covered with dirt, has the date on it of 1777, and the following words still readable':—

"GEOFFREY POWER of Bellelake in memory of his Father PATK. who died May 14, 1859 aged 75 years."

At Duncannon.

Du Noyer, writing in 1850, mentions the following inscription on an old house in this village :—

"IMPERANIE GEORGEI ROBERTO STEARNE
PREFECTO PROPUGNACVLO INSTAURATO ANNO DOMINI 1724."

Killesk—[The church near the water].

‘There is a feudal castle in Killesk in tolerable repair, and the ruin of the mansion house of the ITCHINGHAM family is to be seen in the store-keeper’s yard at Duncannon Fort.

‘At Dunbrody Abbey, in a niche ornamented with cut stone, there was a sarcophagus, representing a Bishop in his robes, said to have been the tomb of Herlewin, a Bishop of Leighlin, and a benefactor to the abbey; this is now broken in pieces, in search of treasure.’

For more about Dunbrody, &c., see Mason, vol. i., p. 469.—
P. D. V.

The late John Davis White, in his notes on this parish, says :—

‘This new and beautiful church, both in style and execution, is a perfect model of tasteful and appropriate architecture. The east window is filled with a beautiful stained glass representation of the Last Supper; the other windows are also of stained glass.

‘In the cemetery attached to the church is a beautiful white marble monument to the memory of a gentleman of the name of Chichester, erected by his widow.’

Mr. White then gives the inscription on the church plate.

‘On the Flagon’ :—

ANCIENT TOMB IN TINTERN CHURCH.

(From the Dublin Penny Journal, for Dec. 1834.)

‘Sir,—In the old church of Tintern, in the County of Wexford, adjoining the once famous abbey of Tintern, stands a tomb belonging to the ancient family of the Colcloughs. The crest and arms were formerly attached to the tomb, but have been removed. In copying the inscription I have followed the exact spelling, as I think it somewhat curious.’—C. D.

COUNTY WICKLOW.

Delgany Parish—Kilcoole.

[From the Rev. R. S. Maffett.]

‘The ivy covered remains of the old church, situated close to the village, and the “Rock of Kilcoole,” lie slightly more E. than S.E. Lewis says that this parish (which is included in the Union of Delgany) “originally formed part of the ancient territory called Crioch Cualan, the maritime portion of the Country of the O’Byrnes, and subsequently of the district of Ranelagh, which for more than two centuries has given the title of Viscount to the family of Jones” (descended from Dr. Jones, Archbishop of Dublin, 1605–1619).

‘Since my visit of the previous year (1892), some repairs had been done to the boundaries of the churchyard. Leaning against the “west” wall, near the N.W. corner of the ground, is a broken stone embedded in earth. It is about 2 feet long, and has a cross in relief about 2 inches high, a part of one of the shafts being 3 inches. The cross touches the extremities of the stone. Inside the ruins of the small church, which are kept locked, there is lying, near the south wall, the broken bowl of a plain (granite?) font, the outside of which is square, measuring 2 feet each way, and 17 inches in depth; the sides are 3 inches thick. About three-quarters of the bowl, which inside is 9 inches deep and has an aperture, remain. An iron railing with locked gate separates the chancel and a small part of the nave from the rest of the church. The chancel, which has served as a mausoleum of the Scott family of Ballygannon, has a round arch and is traversed overhead by iron rods, through which the falling ivy, &c., look exceedingly pretty. This enclosed part is neatly gravelled. The church and graveyard are in charge of a caretaker, paid by the present representative of the above family. There are memorials to other members of this family in the old and new churchyards of Delgany.

‘With respect to the name of Kelly which appears in several inscriptions that I copied from the churchyard in 1892, I may mention that Harris (“Ware’s Antiquities”) says that Crioch-Cualan, “comprehending the north parts of the B. of Arklow, and the S. of the B. of New-Castle, [was] the Seat of a Branch of the O-Kelly’s,” Hy-Maine, in the County Galway, being elsewhere mentioned by him as the “O-Kellys Country.”

‘Of the O’Byrnes he speaks as follows:—“Ranilongis * * *, the Western Part of the County of Wicklow, [was] possessed by a Sept of the O-Birnes, who were a shifting faithless People, and chose to dwell in Caves, Glynnis and Mountains; while another Branch of the O-Birnes, who inhabited the East of the County along the Sea-Coast, from Windegates almost to Arklow, were more obedient to the Laws.”

‘I do not find that O’Byrne’s “Historical Reminiscences of the O’Byrnes,

&c. (privately printed, 1843)," or the pedigrees contained in it, throw any light on the former Ballygannon family of the name, through a marriage into which I have heard the property came to the present owners, it would seem in the earlier part of last century. A Captain Scott, R.N., after losing his ship off Kilcoole, was, it appears, hospitably entertained, along with his officers, by the Byrnes of Ballygannon, and afterwards married a daughter of the house.'

'Passing inside the railing, there lie two flat stones between it and the chancel, close to the south and north walls respectively.

'South side':—

‘Above the comma after “Pie” there seems to have been something like a note of admiration, or letter, cut. The letters N and E are conjoined in this inscription.’

‘North side’ :—

‘Beginning with the north side of the chancel, there is, next to the nave, a small white marble tablet. Above this (and apparently originally joined to it by material of the same description), is a medallion, on which are represented in relief two arms clasping a cross, with incised Latin inscription below. This medallion is one which would be much admired’ :—

“ DEUS MEUS ET OMNIA MEA.

Here rest the remains of CECILIA MARY SCOTT eldest daughter of EDWARD WILLIAM & ANNE SCOTT, who departed this life 4th July 1830 aged nearly 14 years.
 As in Adam all die Even so in Christ shall all be made alive.—I. Cor. c. 15, v. 22.”

‘The next tablet has a border of limestone (?), and is arched ; above the apex of arch there is carved in relief, within a circle, a cross presenting features of the pattée and Maltese descriptions.

‘Some initial letters and some words of the inscription are in red’ :—

Near lie the mortal remains of EDWARD WILLIAM SCOTT A.M. one of the King's Counsel in Ireland, Chairman of the Co. Fermanagh, and 3rd son of JOHN PENDRED SCOTT of Ballygannon Esq. who, in the 53rd year of his age, entered into rest ; on the 7th day of January A.D. 1835.

His integrity as a Judge, sincerity as a friend, affection as a husband, and love as a father, were the results of a deep, and consistent sense of the religion, which guided all the actions of a pure, and guileless life. "In thy presence is fulness of joy." "Absent from the body, present with the Lord."

Also of ANNE, his wife ; daughter of ARTHUR KNOX (of Castle Rea Co. Mayo, and of Woodstock, in this county) Esq and of the Lady MARY, eldest daughter of ANTONY, 8th Earl of Meath. She in her 87th year, fell asleep, April 22nd A.D. 1873, and of CHARLES ADOLPHUS, and ELLEN JANE, their children, who passed away in early youth.

"Christ, have mercy upon us."

"Lord, have mercy upon us."

'The third and last tablet on the north side is white, with some grey marble at top and bottom':—

"In this place lie the remains of JOHN PENDRED SCOTT, Esqr., Formerly of Ballygannon in this Parish. He died on the 13th Feby 1793 after a short illness aged 53 years, leaving 3 sons, JOHN MIDDLETON, JAMES SMYTH, & EDWARD WILLIAM SCOTT surviving him. The greater part of his life was passed in the East Indies, where he established a high character for integrity, justice, benevolence, & generosity : & secured the warm regard & esteem of all who knew him. Having returned to this his native country in the year 1789, he lost his affectionate & pious wife ANNE, daughter of the late JAMES SMYTH Esqr. of the Co. of Westmeath at sea during their passage home. This record of a beloved & revered father, was erected by his surviving son, to mark the spot where his remains rest, in hope of a blessed resurrection. Here also are deposited the bodies of the Lady ARABELLA BARBARA SCOTT, widow of the late Revd. JOHN M. SCOTT, & youngest daughter of ANTHONY late Earl of Meath, a faithful & affectionate wife & mother, who was born 15th Novr. 1772, & died 6th May 1822, aged 50, together with 5 of their children namely ; EMILY ANNE, born 7th Decr. 1807, died 5th March 1814. JULIA MARTHA, born 5th Decr. 1808, died 20th Decr. 1808. ANTHONY ARTHUR, born 28th May 1810, died 10th April 1812. WILLIAM BRABATON, born 12th July 1817, died 28th Sept. 1823. HOPTON, born 13th May 1816, died April 1834."

We regret that want of space obliges us to postpone, until the issue of the next Volume, the remaining epitaphs which the Rev. Mr. Maffett has so kindly sent us, and which are, like all we receive from him, a model of precision, care, and clearness, which is not always the case with some we receive.—ED.

“Sacred to the memory of CHARLES FREEMAN HUME youngest surviving son of the late Rev. QUINTIN D. HUME, And the dearly loved nephew of FITZWILLIAM HUME DICK Esq. of Humewood, by whom this tablet is erected in Testimony of his great and many virtues & loving generous nature. Born in the year 1848 he died at the early age of 34, on the 27th June 1883. Deeply regretted by all who knew him. He was buried in the family vault at Mount Jerome cemetery, Dublin, where his father and eldest brother WILLIAM HOARE HUME and several members of his family are interred. Rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation.—Romans, chapter 12, verse 12.”

“Sacred to the memory of CHARLOTTE ANNE Relict of the late WILLIAM HOARE HUME Esqre. of Humewood, M.P. for the Co. Wicklow, who died 11th of May, 1864, aged 84 years. “In memory of KATHERINE M. M. DENNIS the deservedly beloved wife of THOMAS STRATFORD DENNIS Esqre. of Fortgranite and eldest daughter of MORLEY SAUNDERS Esqre. of Saundersgrove. An illness of a few days deprived her eight children of a tender mother, her attached husband of an affectionate wife, and her kind neighbours of a sincere friend. She died surrounded by her sorrowing family on the 16th July 1825, aged 36 years, and is buried at Baltinglas, close to her eldest brother MORLEY J. S. SAUNDERS who was accidentally killed by his own gun Sept. 27th 1809, and near

This sad tribute to departed worth was erected by her afflicted husband."

'In the churchyard':—

"Sacred to the memory of WILLIAM NUGENT GLASLOCK Esqre. a Post Captain in the Royal Navy, whose premature death was occasioned by his excessive zeal in the discharge of his public duties as an Inspector under the Irish Relief Act in the year 1847. His amiable qualities in every relation of life endeared him to all who knew him, and his memory will be held dear by an extensive circle of friends, more particularly by his afflicted sorrowing widow and two fondly-attached daughters. He died on the 9th of Oct. 1847, in the 56th year of his age."

"Sacred to the memory of ROBERT BROWN Esqr. Surgeon-Major 2nd Batt. 25th Regiment who departed this life at Barraderry House 9th of May 1864. Deeply regretted by all who knew him. THE FONT.

'The white lines seen in photograph are engraved in the stone. The stone is granite. There is a hole through the bottom, and it is evident the font stood on a pillar or pedestal originally, but I never saw it.'

CHURCH PLATE.

'One silver flagon, which is large and handsome, bears date in hall mark of 1725. And a silver cup of 1726.'

THE BELL.

'The old bell was removed from the church tower on the 10th of December, 1890. In my absence, my parishioner, Mr. Pesaix, most thoughtfully copied for me the inscription which was found on it when taken down. It is in French, and is as follows:—

ANCIENT FONT IN WICKLOW CHURCH.

"LAN 1771. IAL. ETE. FAIT. PAR HEBAN LE. FLIS. ET. PAR. HERBA. LE. FLIS."

'There are figures cast on the bell representing a bishop with mitre;
a crucifix with a woman clasping it at the foot; the Virgin and Child.'

"IE. PESSE. 248."

'These letters are cut with a chisel.'

'Letters cut on wood-work suspending bell':—

"IEPESSE. 288. EN. TOUT."

'Translated, the inscription reads':—

"Year 1771, I have been made by Heban the Son and by Herba the Son.
I weigh 248 lbs.
I weigh 288 lbs. in all."

'The Bell is erected at Tinnakelly House, the residence of the late Captain

He also thinks the date of the death of Jane Anne Willington, of Killoskehan, is correctly given in "Burke's Landed Gentry," as occurring on the 17th March, 1822, and not as given in line 19.
